Crucial Test at Polls

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Quebec voters overwhelmingly swept the pro-federalist Liberal party into office Wednesday in one of the province's most crucial elections since Confederation.

Robert Bourassa, leading the Liberal party in his first campaign, defeated the Union Nationale government of Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand which had governed the province since 1966.

After a campaign in which Quebec independence was a major issue, Rene Levesque saw his separatist Parti Quebecois gather 24 per cent of the popular vote, although he suffered personal defeat.

The Liberals with 44 per cent of the popular vote won 65.7 per cent of the seats in the legislature. The Union Nationale, with only 20 per cent of the popular vote, and the Creditistes with 11 per cent of the popular vote, won 14.7 per cent and 12 per cent of the seats respectively.

The Parti Quebecois, however, with 24 per cent of the popular vote, won only 6.4 per cent of the seats in the legislature.

Final standing when counting ended for the night, compared with the results of the June 5, 1966, general election:

	1970	1966
Liberal	71	50
Union Nationale	16	56
Creditiste	13	—
Parti Quebecois	7	—
Independent	—	2
Doubtful	1	—
Total	108	108

The election of a strong majority government at a time when Quebec is in the midst of economic uncertainty brought jubilation to the business and financial community.

Growing separatist strength in recent years was blamed by business leaders for a slowdown in the economy of the province, currently plagued with a level of unemployment only surpassed in the Atlantic provinces.

Bourassa said this morning that he is leaving immediately for Quebec City to begin forming his new government. He said he hopes to announce his cabinet within 10 days and that medicare and a budget will receive priority.

"Drafting a budget will be a difficult task in view of the present financial position of the province," he said.

Medicare, he added, will be introduced July 1.

Leading business executives said the result will set an improved climate which they hope will attract capital and encourage growth.

The Liberals and the pro-federalist Creditiste party together won a total of 84 seats and 55 per cent of the popular vote. The Liberal share of the vote was 44 per cent.

The Parti Quebecois, meanwhile, received 24 per cent of the popular vote, three times the support sepa-

Viet Cong Driven From Cambodia Towns

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese armored force supported by American planes and artillery pushed 24 miles into Cambodia today and occupied towns from which the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese drove the Cambodian army earlier this month.

The South Vietnamese did not fire a shot in taking Chipou and entering Prasaut, on Highway 1. But another Saigon force thrusting in from another direction encountered heavy resistance.

With U.S. advisers accompanying them, more than 15,000 South Vietnamese troops were pushing across a section of eastern Cambodia in a pincer operation to smash North Vietnamese base camps.

South Vietnamese spokesmen reported 435 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese killed, many of them by American planes.

Two American advisers were wounded, the U.S. Command said. They were the first U.S. ground casualties reported in an offensive operation on Cambodian soil, although other Americans have been wounded in planes that strayed across the border.

HIT IN ERROR

Field reports said South Vietnamese casualties so far were 32 killed and 168 wounded. Fifty-five of the wounded, their commander said, were the victims of U.S. helicopter gunships which fired by mistake on a battalion of government troops.

Associated Press correspondent Peter Arnet reported from Chipou that the Saigon force moving into Prasaut expected to link up Friday morning with Cambodian troops operating out of Svay Reing, the provincial capital.

But a Cambodian government spokesman in Phnom Penh said the Americans and the South Vietnamese had not informed his government of the invasion, and Cambodian forces were taking no part in the operation.

The decision to move so deep into Cambodia was not made until this morning, the operation commander, Lt.-Gen. Do Cao Tri, said. The original targets of the invasion force were Viet Cong and North Vietnamese bases just a few miles inside the border, but Tri said he decided to make a major thrust along Route 1 "so that we could finish the job, neat and tidy."

Laos Attack Destroys Status Quo

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — The strategic southern Laotian town of Attopeau was captured by North Vietnamese troops today in what observers here called the beginning of the end of the status quo in Laos.

It marked the first time that North Vietnamese or Pathet Lao forces had crossed a ceasefire line established in 1962 to attack a government outpost.

Military observers here believe the North Vietnamese captured Attopeau to stop government forces moving into areas traditionally controlled by the Pathet Lao but recently weakened by the Communist troop pullback.

Politically, the fall of Attopeau may have far reaching consequences, the observers said.

They said it had destroyed the general belief in Vientiane that for all their strength and numerical superiority the North Vietnamese would not cross the ceasefire line to move into areas controlled by the government since 1962.

CAMBODIA OPERATION NOT LONG-TERM—U.S.

The White House privately assured key congressmen today that President Nixon does not intend to involve the United States in a "long-term quicksand operation" in Cambodia.

(Strategy Analysis, Page 30)

But the unsigned statement circulated on Capitol Hill said the president found it necessary to send advisers and arms into Cambodia from Vietnam "to save American lives."

The memorandum was circulated in advance of the president's speech to the nation tonight in which he will seek to allay fears that the allied thrust into Cambodia may widen the war in Southeast Asia.

U.S. Agency Probes Tampering Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is investigating charges that some of its officials have manipulated laboratory result for years to avoid weakening or contradicting established government policies on food additives and pesticide safety.

The charges, brought by Dr. Howard L. Richardson, chief pathologist in the FDA's bureau of science, contend that middle-level agency officials have expunged conclusions and recommendations from reports on animal experiments because they cast doubt on FDA policies.

The findings might have caused FDA policy-makers to reconsider "safe" labels for certain food additives and coloring agents and to re-estimate permissible pesticide levels for food.

A pathologist employed by the FDA to investigate the charges has found substantial support for Richardson's charge.

"There have been modifications of statements and reports," said the consultant, Dr. Harold Stewart, retired

VOTE DOESN'T CHANGE IT

Difficult Period Ahead—WAC

The Quebec election doesn't change the fact that Canada "is going to be in a very difficult period for the next few years," Premier Bennett said today.

Bennett said in an interview he is pleased that one party — the Liberals — received a majority of seats in the election, but noted that "the separatists have the second largest number of votes."

He said constitutional problems will have to be de-emphasized and economic problems stressed in the years ahead and added he feels Liberal Leader Robert Bourassa will agree with him on that score.

Not only Bourassa. Politicians across Canada were viewing Wednesday night's results in much the same light as British Columbia's premier.

MIZED FEELINGS

There is a mixture of feelings including:

Relief in the clear majority for the Liberals indicating an affirmation of Quebec's willingness to give confederation another chance;

Caution because the separatist Parti Quebecois came second with almost one-quarter of the popular vote suggesting a core of support that could increase if the Liberals fail;

And apprehension because Bourassa under pressure of inflation must try to switch popular dissatisfaction from ideology to battling the economic and unemployment problems that fueled the separatist fire.

AMAZING

Bennett described the performance of the Creditistes as "amazing," but said the disparity between popular vote and seats won by all parties in the election indicates the need for redistribution in Quebec.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett agreed with Bennett's

Federalism Favored—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today the Quebec election returns prove without doubt that Quebecers are overwhelmingly in favor of federalism.

This was shown not only in the "huge landslide" for the Liberals, he told reporters, but also in the vote for the Creditistes.

Trudeau said a lot of people who voted for the separatist Parti Quebecois were not voting for separatism but for a change from the old parties.

The prime minister said the separatist vote was no doubt due to many generations of frustration and anguish. These feelings would not disappear overnight.

END OF ROAD FOR MIRIAM

LONDON (Reuters) — It probably is the end of the road for Britain's most persistent student driver, 62-year-old Miriam Hargrave.

She failed her driving test Wednesday for the 39th time.

Mrs. Hargrave, listed in the Gunness Book of Records as champion of Britain for driving test failure, has spent more than £300 ($780) on lessons since she started in 1961.

Last Cheer in Doubt Despite UN Collapse

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP) — The sudden collapse of Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand's Union Nationale party has given both federalists and separatists something to cheer about.

It remains to be seen who will have the last cheer.

Robert Bourassa's Liberals, Quebec's most federalist party, won 71 of the 108 legislature seats in Wednesday's general election as the Union Nationale representation sank to 16.

But Rene Levesque's separatist Parti Quebecois attracted nearly a quarter of the votes, a moral victory for his new party. Seven separatists were elected.

In terms of popular vote the separatist party is far from the minuscule Prime Minister Trudeau once said it was. The Parti Quebecois has become the leading opposition party in this regard.

Even though Mr. Levesque himself was defeated, he could take consolation in seeing his party become the main opposition force to the Liberals in their stronghold on Montreal Island.

MAKE STRONG SHOWING

The Creditistes, also a federalist party, won 13 seats in their first foray into provincial politics in Quebec. They gathered 11 per cent of the popular vote, almost all of it in rural Quebec.

Thirty-five per cent of Quebecers voted against the two traditional parties. This wave of protest virtually flattened the Union Nationale, but the Liberals held firm.

Mr. Bourassa's 71-seat victory pales somewhat when regarded in terms of popular vote. The Liberals got about 44 per cent of the vote, less than in 1966 when they won only 50 seats.

In effect, the Liberal landslide is explained by a combination of the party's own strength, the Union Nationales weakness and the Creditiste and separatist vote in several ridings.

The question now is whether some kind of a coalition will form between the urban-based Parti Quebecois and the rural-based Union Nationale, a diminishing electoral force in Quebec since 1956.

A number of Union Nationale members, including Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal and Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Marcel Masse, have flirted with separatism and may try to line up their party with Mr. Levesque's growing group.

This political situation will keep up the pressure for constitutional change despite what could be regarded as an emphatic rejection of separatism by Quebec voters.

MOST FAVOR UNION

As a referendum on independence, one might argue that the election showed at least two thirds of Quebecers in favor of keeping Quebec within Canada.

Mr. Bourassa had pledged to make federalism work for the prosperity of Quebecers. He wants money from Ottawa and says he will conduct "tight-fisted" constitutional negotiations.

His immediate tasks include the making of a cabinet. He has 71 legislature members to choose from, but most are, like himself, without cabinet experience.

Israel Renews Plea for Aid

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Abba Eban called on the United States today to fulfil its commitments and ensure Israeli security to counter Russia's growing military involvement in Egypt.

Eban, speaking at a news conference referred to a statement by State Secretary William P. Rogers that the U.S. "would ensure the security of Israel is not jeopardized" when he announced the interim American rejection of Israeli requests for more Phantom and Skyhawk jets last month.

A statement from Tel Aviv Wednesday that Russian pilots were flying defence missions over central Egypt was followed by an announcement that President Nixon has ordered a full study to determine whether the Middle East arms balance has been affected.

U.S. officials said the Soviet Union's direct participation in Egypt's air defences had apparently changed the Middle East balance in favor of the Arabs.

Presidential spokesman Ronald Ziegler indicated that the review would determine whether Nixon would change his decision, announced in March, not to act on an Israeli request for 25 Phantom and 100 Skyhawk warplanes.

Meanwhile, on the battle front, Egypt said it made its biggest and deepest penetration raid since 1967 into Israeli-held territory today along the Suez canal, doing heavy damage to Israeli fortifications.

Israel denied the claim. The Israelis said their troops and planes repelled the Egyptian attack before dawn today and sank four Egyptian boats.

Nine hours after the Egyptian raid, the Israeli military command said Israeli jets launched two air attacks against Egyptian positions on the canal, and all planes returned safely.

In Phnom Penh, a Cambodian military spokesman said today his government cannot approve the crossing of its neutral borders by South Vietnamese forces with U.S. support to attack Communist positions.

Maj. Am Rong said it would be up to the government of Premier Lon Nol, who seized power March 18, to decide whether to protest the intrusion.

Am Rong said Cambodian authorities had not verified the attack, announced Wednesday in Saigon, but that if it did take place, "my government cannot approve because we are a neutral country."

The British government said today it favors "the genuine neutrality of Cambodia" through a peace conference and not through the battlefield.

A foreign office spokesman said "We neither support nor condemn the American action there. We merely state that the right way to tackle the problem of the war in Indochina is through a conference."

assessment of separatist strength as "significant" and emphasized the need for solving Quebec's economic problems.

He said Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque cannot be dismissed. The separatist leader should receive "an open invitation" to continue in political life in the mainstream of Canada's development.

And, said Barrett, there is now no excuse for the Quebec and federal governments failing to get together to solve Quebec's economic problems.

New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas said it would be a mistake for Canadians to assume the Quebec vote was a "simple, clear-cut vote for federalism."

The heavy "protest" vote against the Union Nationale government of Quebec Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand was based largely on economic disparities, and Ottawa must be more sympathetic to those problems, Douglas said.

Bourassa told cheering supporters in Montreal his party's victory was a challenge "to show that Quebc can stay in Canada."

However, he also said the province "will face that challenge taking into account that Quebec is not a province like the others."

Robert Nixon, leader of the Ontario Liberal party, was "delighted" by the Liberal victory and the show of support for federalism in Quebec, but added:

"I don't think the Parti Quebecois is dead by any means."

SEPARATISM 'REJECTED'

Conservative Premier John Robarts of Ontario said he was delighted the people of Quebec had "so forcibly rejected the concept of separatism."

Joseph Smallwood, Liberal premier of Newfoundland, said he was "very, very happy" with the outcome of the election and added there was no doubt the Quebec people had rejected separatism.

Conservative Premier G. I. Smith of Nova Scotia said the result was a "good sign for Confederation."

Real Caouette, leader of the federal Ralliement Creditiste, saw the vote as a decisive rejection of separatism and "a pretty successful start" for the provincial Creditistes, who won 13 seats.

chief pathologist for the National Cancer Institute.

Richarson's allegations, say a congressional expert on the FDA, "cast doubt on the integrity of all FDA scientific positions for decades."

The FDA is a primary research centre on the effects of additives and pesticides on human health and Richardson's charges deal with these factors —not drugs.

The government imposed restrictions on cyclamates in 1969, after outside experiments linked the chemicals to bladder cancer, genetic damage and birth defects in animals.

Richardson, who joined the agency in 1968, said the old FDA slides and laboratory work sheets revealed what he termed a suspiciously high incidence of cancer in the test animals. The cancer findings were not mentioned in the published report.

DIDN'T WRITE REPORT

The pathologist who conducted the original research told Richardson a non-pathologist superior had written the report and that he, the pathologist, had only signed it.

"He stated that he didn't want to fight with people," Richardson quoted the pathologist as saying. "This was his policy over the years."

Experts believe cyclamates might not have been widely used—or possibly even permitted — if the 951 cancer findings had been known by scientists.

Richardson blamed what he termed the disgraceful scientific climate in the FDA on separations of research experts from top policy officials by a middle-level of bureaucracy.

The middle officials are determined to protect their jobs by supporting top level policl decisions at all costs, he said.

Region Votes More Pay

Directors of the Capital Regional District voted Wednesday to raise the annual pay of the chairman to $2,000 from $500.

The recently-created position of deputy chairman, who conducts the Capital Regional Hospital District meetings, will receive $1,000. There was no amount before.

The payment for the 18 directors, or their alternates, remains unchanged — $25 for each board meeting attended.

This year's regional board chairman is Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis. The deputy chairman is North Saanich Mayor J. B. Cumming.

Several directors said the new pay levels are reasonable because of the growing work load.

ratist parties got in the 1966 campaign.

Levesque, 47-year-old journalist and cabinet minister in the former Liberal government of Jean Lesage, did not indicate who might lead the Parti Quebecois in the legislature or whether he would seek a seat in one of the ridings captured by his party.

He had quit the Liberal party while in opposition to form the Parti Quebecois. This was the first real test of the Parti Quebecois.

Levesque hopes to establish an independent Quebec in an economic association with the rest of Canada.

A total of 466 candidates contested the 108 seats in an election that resulted in the arrest of at least 35 persons for alleged election irregularities. Most of those held were arrested for arguing with poll officials. Others were held for having baseball bats and chains in cars which they were driving or riding in.

SURPASS 1966 TURNOUT

Estimates were that the 72-per-cent turnout in the 1966 election was surpassed. There were 3,481,598 registered voters.

The Liberals took 27 seats away from the Union Nationale, defeating eight cabinet ministers.

The Parti Quebecois took five Montreal Island seats from the Union Nationale, defeating two cabinet ministers in the process.

Defeated cabinet ministers included Finance Minister Mario Beaulieu, regarded as leadership material for the Union Nationale.

Other defeated cabinet ministers were: Resources Minister Paul Allard; Minister without Portfolio Jean-Marie Morin; Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer; Industry Minister Jean-Paul Beaudry; Solicitor-General Armand Malthais; Forestry Minister Claude Gosselin; Communications minister Gerard Lebel; Transport Minister Fernand Lizotte; Revenue Minister Raymond Johnston; Municipal Affairs Minister Robert Lussier, and Minister without Portfolio Francois Mathieu.

Levesque was defeated by one of his former election organizers, Liberal Andre Marhand, a 43-year-old printer.

NDP SHUT OUT

All 13 candidates of Quebec's New Democratic Party were defeated.

Bertrand himself was re-elected while Creditiste leader Camil Samson, a 35-year-old car salesman from Rouyn, was elected in Rouyn-Noranda, taking a seat away from the Union Nationale.

Among ridings taken from the Union Nationale by the Liberals was Trois-Rivers, held by the Union Nationale since the late premier Maurice Duplessis captured it in 1936.

Bourassa, 36-year-old lawyer-economist who was virtually unknown until six months ago, described the landslide victory as a challenge to prove Quebec can remain in Canada.

"And we will face that challenge taking into account that Quebec is not a province like the others. And we are confident that we will succeed."

The new Liberal government would devote its first efforts to the province's serious unemployment problem, he said, recalling his campaign promise to create 100,000 new jobs in 1971.

Bertrand, a 53-year-old lawyer, said he would remain as leader of the Union Nationale in opposition for the time being.

Visibly moved, Bertrand recalled that he had asked Quebecers to give the province a majority government.

"They did so, and it's a good thing for Quebec."

Samson said the election demonstrates that Quebecers are not separatists and prefer to taste prosperity within Canada rather than risk the economic effects of independence.

Levesque described the election as "extraordinarily comforting for the next step." He said the Parti Quebecois has become the leading opposition party in terms of the popular vote.

The Liberals should not interpret their election victory as a mandate for the constitutional status quo "because this is not so."

Probe Dead Crustaceans

Federal marine biologists in Nanaimo today are analysing samples of shrimp-like crustaceans discovered dead Wednesday in Decanso Bay on Gabriola Island.

Fisheries protection branch spokesman Ed Epps in Nanaimo said today the dead animals, one inch long and one-sixteenth inch thick, have not been found anywhere else besides Decanso Bay.

"This situation is not abnormal," he said. "We don't expect to find anything unusual."

Epps said although many dead animals have been found in the bay, he could not suggest what might be the cause. He said he was unaware of the existence of pollutants in the bay which might have killed the animals.

Bishops Take Stand

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Rhodesia's five Roman Catholic bishops announced Wednesday they would have to close every Catholic school, orphanage, home for the elderly and any other Catholic-run institution unless the government repeals its Land Tenure Act. The act intenches racial discrimination and would impede work by white Catholic priests, nuns and others, in African areas.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the name of economy President Lyndon B. Johnson ordered the lights turned off at the White House. Now President Nixon is selling two of the Three presidential yachts.

At Pier One at Washington's navy yard Tuesday, Tricia Nixon took part in the decommissioning of the 92 foot "Patricia," which her father renamed for her after he took office.

At the coast guard station at Miami Beach, Fla., the 64-foot cabin cruiser "Julie was deactivated.

The sale of the yachts will leave Nixon with only one presidential cruiser, the Sequoia, anchored on the Potomac.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Jeff was still in bed, although in bed at home, when I walked down the road to see him this morning. The old Wyoming cowboy looked kind of pale after his spell in the hospital from a heart attack, but his bright eyes twinkled with his usual good humor.

"Say," he said, "my doctor just left, and he told me that my skin, and everybody's skin, is getting thinner because of the weather."

Jeff said he had learned that the skin is thicker in winter and that along about April 1 the tissue starts to get thinner.

Researchers have found, the doctor told Jeff, that the changing thickness of his skin helps him to become acclimatized to the weather. The temperature of the body tends to go down less as the tissue under the skin increases in thickness during the winter. Then, when Jeff and the rest of us don't need the insulation of a thicker skin because the weather gets warmer, our bodies obligingly make our skins thinner.

Guards Protect Gaglardi

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hotel security staff and guards Wednesday prevented demonstrators from getting near Welfare Minister P. A. Gaglardi while he was telling child welfare officials that the British Columbia government is trying to improve human dignity.

Outside the hotel, about 200 demonstrators paraded around the building protesting unemployment and poor welfare programs.

Later the minister had an altercation with the leader of the protest.

Gaglardi told delegates to the Northwest Region convention of the Child Welfare League of America that most welfare programs are bureaucratic and do little for anyone with a problem.

"Instead of enhancing a person or building up his human stature we have deteriorated it with some kind of government activity," he said.

"I don't think that government should be in that kind of endeavor."

Before demonstrators arrived, the hotel staff had reversed escalators leading to the convention floor and stationed uniformed commissionaires at all stairways leading to the area.

The demonstration was organized by the unemployed citizens' Welfare Improvement Council of Vancouver and Local 213 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Alex Bonde of the council, who led the protest, managed to get into the convention area following Gaglardi's speech and confronted the minister with the accusation that he had done nothing to find jobs.

NERVE GAS SUIT GETS ONE JUDGE

PORTLAND (AP) — A hearing on a motion by Oregon and Washington to have a three-judge federal panel hear a suit to stop the army's transfer of nerve gas to Oregon has been cancelled.

The case will be heard by U.S. district judge Robert C. Belloni, not a three-judge panel.

Cancellation of the scheduled hearing was made known Wednesday when the states withdrew their opposition to a federal motion for a single judge.

No date was set for the next step in the states' suit against defence secretary Melvin Laird, charging that the army's plans for bringing the nerve gas from Okinawa to Oregon would be illegal and would impose unconstitutional burdens on the states in protecting the public.

Oregon Attorney General Lee Johnson in Salem said it appeared likely that a case filed against the shipment by the American Civil Liberties Union in Seattle also would be assigned to judge Belloni.

Residents Object To Gas Shipment

By The Associated Press

Considerable numbers of Washington State and Oregon residents apparently share Okinawa's feeling about nerve gas: they don't want it.

The result is a problem for the United States defence department, which plans to ship the gas home.

The situation, stalled pending court decisions, began in July 1969 when 23 army personnel and a civilian were taken to hospital at a military base on Okinawa. Sources said they were injured by leaking nerve gas.

Okinawa demanded immediate removal of the U.S. chemical weapons, and Japan charged the United States had shipped such weapons secretly to other countries.

REMOVAL SET

Shortly thereafter, the defence department admitted it had been doing so since the 1950s. It said it would remove the material from Okinawa, which is to be returned to Japan by the U.S.

Okinawa has been for many years one of the primary storage areas for munitions, supplies and men for much of the Pacific area.

The controversy in Washington and Oregon started as soon as the defence department announced last December it would ship the nerve gas, later described as being in fluid form rather than gaseous, through portions of the two states.

Defence department plans call for the Okinawa stores to arrive by ship at the Bangor, Wash., naval ammunition depot and travel by train through western Washington into Oregon to the Umatilla depot near Hermiston, Ore.

ROUTE NEAR B.C.

The gas will pass through Juan de Fuca Strait, 15 miles off Vancouver Island, a route which has sparked protests and demonstrations in British Columbia.

Civil defence officials in B.C. have drawn up plans, in co-operation with their counterparts in Washington state and Oregon, and say they could evacuate people if necessary.

Hermiston residents are willing; they have lived with munitions storage for years.

But governors Tom McCall of Oregon and Dan Evans of Washington filed a suit in an attempt to block the shipment. Other suits were filed by the American Civil Liberties Union, for Seattle Mayor Wes Uhlman, and by a group of Washington and Oregon residents.

Petitions protesting the shipment were signed, one of them half a mile in length. Opposition groups formed, including People Against Nerve Gas (PANG).

Congressional representatives decried the shipment plans. Proposals were made for storage elsewhere and for deactivation or disposal of the material.

Defence department spokesmen, however, say there are no plans for disposal. They say the chemical weapons stocks are vital.

GERMANY RECOVERED

Few Nazi Signs Left

BERLIN (Reuters) — Rats and rabbits scurry over the deserted grassy mound that marks the place where Adolf Hitler and his mistress Eva Braun committed suicide 25 years ago today.

The insignificant bump on the bleak landscape near the heavily-guarded Berlin Wall achieved notoriety when the Nazi leader, watching as the capital of his Third Reich crumbled under advancing Red Army tanks, decided to end his life.

Little is left in Berlin recalling memories of the German dictator who, within a few years, transformed a demoralized, crisis-shaken Germany into a military power that brought horror, misery and death to millions of people. Most of Berlin was destroyed.

Little is left of Hitler's spirit in the mind of modern West Germans. Whatever collective guilt they may feel, most of them think it was erased by their individual suffering in the last years of the war, the Nuernberg war crimes trials and the loss to the Communists of Germany's Eastern territories.

Fishing Stopped By Pollution

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis told the Commons Wednesday he will ask the Ontario and Quebec governments to ban commercial fishing in the Ottawa River this season because of mercury pollution.

Davis said recent tests have shown mercury pollution in the river to be "just marginally below acceptable levels."

Outside the House, Davis said the contamination levels were highest downstream from the Ottawa area and had affected in particular pike, sunfish and one species of bass.

He said he expected Ontario to act today to cancel the commercial licences of the six fishermen on the west side of the river but could not say when action would be taken by Quebec until after Wednesday's provincial election. The Ontario fishing season begins Friday, May 1.

The minister said the contamination is believed to have resulted from the use of chemicals by pulp mills on the river to remove slime from logs. The plants have not used the compounds for the last two years, he said, but concentrations had built up over the last two decades.

Loss to commercial fishermen on the river was expected to be "a few thousand dollars" at most, Davis said.

Davis said sport fishing on the river would not be affected by the ban but advised against anyone eating a large number of fish taken by sportsmen.

Anti-Riot Measure

PARIS (AP) — The French National Assembly early today passed a stiff anti-riot bill threatening prison for anyone arrested at an unauthorized demonstration that turns to violence.

Leftist opponents of the bill charged that it raised the prospect of authoritarian rule, but the Gaullist coalition won the vote 368 to 84. The bill now goes to the Senate.

The bill provides penalties of two years' imprisonment for participation in an unauthorized demonstration that becomes violent and three years for organizers of such demonstrations. All involved in the demonstrations would be jointly liable for damages.

Justice Minister Rene Pleven told the deputies the bill is aimed not at legitimate protest and unions' right to strike, but at "certain new forms of delinquency," including armed bands of revolutionary students whose programs he said include "urban guerrilla warfare."

The bill does not require proof that the person charged committed the violent act. His presence at the scene of violence is proof of guilt.

A chorus of opposition leaders, newspapers and prominent lawyers contend that it introduces the concept of collective responsibility for criminal offences into French law and permits police to make indiscriminate arrests.

The Winner Is Canada

MR. ROBERT BOURASSA'S spectacular Liberal victory in the Quebec provincial election, leaping to office with 71 seats from a total of 49 in the last National Assembly, has brought relief and satisfaction to all parts of Canada. The Quebec decision, demonstrated both in legislative seats and in the percentage vote, was overwhelmingly in favor of Confederation. It showed a clear preference for a political leader who promised improved economic and financial conditions, within the Canadian framework, as opposed to the political manoeuvrings of Mr. Bertrand or the separatist exhortations of Mr. Levesque.

The election result carries a corresponding responsibility for the country as a whole. English-speaking Canada should show the people of Quebec that they were right in believing that they can achieve a fair deal and do it within the bounds of Confederation — that they do not have to break out of the Canadian family to enjoy a future of cultural and lingual security and economic equality. Canada must not now sit back, on the basis of yesterday's results, and think that the so-called "Quebec problem" is in the bag and that nothing more need be done. The requirement is clearer than ever that Canadian unity must be worked for, and that good sense should be repaid with good will.

Ottawa will be moved to show that Mr. Bourassa's promises of better economic conditions within Quebec are also a matter of national concern, and that the new provincial government will have help in coping with its problems. The election results show that jobs and prosperity are major interests of the people of Quebec, just as they are in any part of Canada, and that a desperate resort to secession was favored only by a minority whose main driving force was racially divisive.

Not all of the Parti Quebecois vote was separatist — for many it represented merely a voice of protest against existing conditions but — a sizable portion of the 24 per cent of the total vote won by Mr. Levesque's party stood for an extremist Quebec point of view, and that portion still exists. The success of Mr. Bourassa's government over the next year or two will determine whether the extremist element will grow or dwindle. It is unfortunate in one sense that Mr. Levesque lost his seat, for he exercised a moderating influence on the party into which he had merged a number of separatist groups.

The Creditistes, winning their first representation in the Quebec National Assembly, showed a surprising strength by taking 13 seats and nearly ousting the Union Nationale, with 16 members, as the official opposition. Premier Bertrand suffered a crushing defeat after four years of office. He was rejected by far more than the English-speaking voters to whom he ascribes his failure.

For Mr. Bourassa, a 36-year-old in his first attempt at office, the victory constitutes an astounding achievement. He has proved himself as a vote-getter, he must now prove himself as a government leader. The hopes of Canadians both inside and outside of Quebec will go with him as he attempts to create social stability and economic progress in a province which contains more than a quarter of the nation's population.

The Dragon Tries Charm

THE ENIGMA THAT IS CHINA appears to be moving once again into the world arena after retreating into a xenophobic shell during the cultural revolution. At that time, in mid-1966, China withdrew her ambassadors from abroad except for the envoy in Cairo. This was a fantastic diplomatic stance for a nation that is physically one of the three largest in the world and contains almost one-third of the planet's population.

The tentative sniffing of the international air was manifested recently by Chou En-lai's goodwill visit to North Korea. Relations between the two Asian states were severely strained during the cultural revolution but that seems to have been forgotten. North Korea was chosen as the first foreign country for any high-level Chinese delegation to visit since mid-1966. Besides the Korean visit, two Chinese delegations have visited Pakistan in recent months, and in Peking there are hints of new visits this year to Nepal and North Vietnam by Premier Chou. China's interest in the Arab world was illustrated during the cultural revolution; their Cairo representative was the only ranking envoy who remained abroad. Now Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization has been accorded a red-carpet treatment by Peking.

The diplomatic activity has been sudden, but not without reason. China feels cramped. One of the main worries appears to be Japanese re-armament, coupled with the joint Nixon-Sato statement that South Korea and the nationalist island of Formosa were vital to Japan's security. To this new element are wedded Chinese fears of their long border with the Soviet Union, where relations are still strained, and the fact that an active war is being waged a few hundred miles south of Chinese soil by the United States.

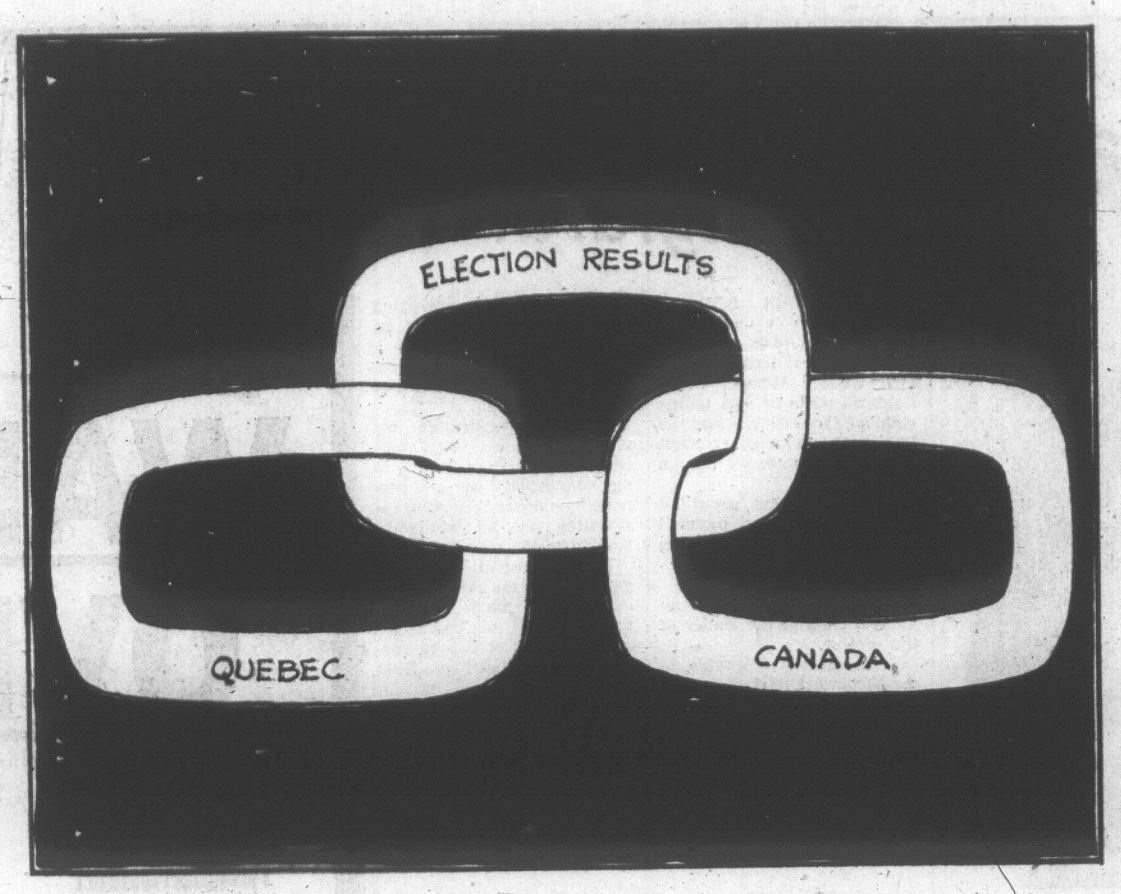
With historic armed enemies on all sides, the Chinese may be anxious to cultivate friends in the international community. Last May and June they dispatched 17 ambassadors throughout the world in an unprecedented flurry of friend-getting. While some observers think this new attitude could result in Canada and China exchanging envoys soon, the Communists still insist that Canada should make a specific declaration as to Peking's sovereignty over Taiwan. For obvious reasons Canada will have no part in such a bargain. Perhaps the sincerity of China's new international posture may be gauged in part by how she resolves her differences with Canada.

Now, Not Three Months Hence

FISHERIES MINISTER JACK Davis, expressing concern that British Columbia red tape could snarl quick action on reported mercury pollution of upper Howe Sound, says: "We want something done now, not three months from now." He elaborates on the statement with the explanation that the company believed to be discharging mercury into the waters indicated, at a Saturday meeting, that it was ready to order equipment and clean up existing contamination, and to stop any new pollution immediately. But, he says, the company was told by provincial authorities not to make any move until it had approval.

The minister's comment underscores the apparent leisureliness with which the provincial government is arranging a public inquiry on waste management and environmental control in the forest products industry. The enquiry, says the departmental news release, will be held in Vancouver on August 11. That is nearly three months hence — and would presumably be only the beginning of provincial government action to correct any unsatisfactory conditions such an investigation might reveal.

Perhaps it is necessary to provide ample time for various interests to prepare submissions. But if the industry is guilty of practices now creating pollution, notice of a distant inquiry does little to halt contamination. A concerned public will echo the comment of the fisheries minister: "We want something done now, not three months from now."



BOURASSA'S TRIUMPH AND TASK

Separatism's War Will Go On

By RICHARD PURSER

QUEBEC'S multitude of "undecided" voters — 35 per cent of the total as revealed by the last pre-election public opinion poll — made up their minds at the last minute and on Wednesday gave the province a Liberal government with a majority of nearly twice as many seats as the other three parties combined.

Purser

It was a startling result, but a continuation of Quebeckers' traditional ability to detect a bandwagon and get on it. Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand mentioned after the opinion poll appeared that he was not worried because those who flirted with third parties (actually a third and a fourth party in this case) between elections always reverted to the "old" parties at voting time.

He was right, but the old party they reverted to this time was not his. Toward the end of his collapsing campaign he tried to charge that the unflattering polls were faked as part of an attempt by the English and French press, both said dominated by high finance, to destroy him. In fact, the polls were quite accurate in predicting the showing of the two "new" parties. The opinion poll figures gave the Parti Quebecois 19 per cent and the Creditistes 10 per cent. The actual figures turned out to be 24 and 11 per cent respectively.

Predicted for the National Union was 10 per cent; with its share of the undecided vote, it got 20.1 per cent. But the Liberals got a vastly greater share, up to 44 per cent from a predicted 24 per cent.

Strangely enough, the Liberal popular percentage of the vote this year was slightly less than the party received in 1966, when the NU got a smaller vote but won more seats and formed the government. On Wednesday, the Liberal vote was better distributed on Quebec's uneven electoral map, resulting in a landslide victory. The Liberals gained about 30 seats and the NU lost about 40.

A collective sigh of relief could almost be heard from Quebec as the results came in. The great fear had been that the unfamilar four-way party split would result in a minority government at a dangerous time of economic trouble, social dissatisfaction and also controversy over separatism.

If the sigh of relief was loudest from Quebec's English speaking community, lay it to that community's special concern with the latter issue — separatism. While the election was to a large extent fought on economic issues, especially relating to unemployment and declining investment, and on the issue of competent administration in government, the question of separatism underlay everything in the debate.

Forced to the fore by Parti Quebecois leader René Levesque, separatism became the number one factor, and certainly the one most closely watched by the rest of Canada. It became wrapped up with the economic question, since the threat of separatism contributed to unemployment and declining investment. The moving of nine Brinks' truckloads of Quebec securities to Toronto a few days before the election jolted voters with a sense of the fickleness of economic confidence. Unpublicized in the press but well known by word of mouth was a simultaneous flight of savings from the Caisses Populaires, the church-related credit unions found in every Catholic parish in Quebec and patronized almost entirely by the French-speaking.

Impossible NU Course

With the PQ espousing separatism and the Liberals defending federalism, the NU decided to try for an impossible middle ground between the two views, and met with disaster. Conversation in Montreal gathering places before the election was invariably dominated by the view that the NU had discredited itself and that one must vote Liberal or PQ. (The Creditistes, a ruarl party, do not figure in the Montreal area.)

Now the Liberals are in power and the 36-year-old political neophyte, Robert Bourassa, will occupy Canada's second hottest political seat. He has accepted the challenge of showing during his next four or five years of undisputed power that Quebec can stay in Canada.

But just because an anti-separatist government has taken over Quebec with as decisive a mandate as could be imagined, does not mean that all concern for the future should end with the national sigh of relief. Mr. Bourassa is not an automatically committed federalist. He is a Quebec nationalist who believes pragmatically that Quebec has more to gain by working effectively within Confederation than by stalking out of it on an emotional binge. But he realizes that he has to prove this against a tough challenge from the PQ that is bound to continue. He has to prove that Confederation works for Quebec, at least enough to overcome any clamor the PQ and the NU may raise during the next few years.

The PQ was, technically speaking, defeated, and now is the smallest party in the National Assembly. But despite its lowly seven seats compared with 16 seats for the NU and 13 for the Creditistes, it will be the real opposition, whoever else has the title of Official Opposition. It will no doubt attract allies from the NU ranks as Mr. Bertrand's authority inevitably weakens, since some of the most nationalist NU members, those closest to the PQ in philosophy, were among those who survived Wednesday's devastation.

Mr. Levesque in fact considers himself the de facto leader of the opposition. His party got a greater share of the popular vote than either of the other two opposition parties who won more seats. He lost his own seat and his chief associate failed to win election. But the PQ won seven seats, mostly in working class Montreal ridings, which disproves the theory that the PQ appeals only to students and intellectuals. One winner was 24-year-old Claude Charron, who becomes the PQ man to watch.

The Levesque election night gathering was bizarre in the extreme. Most losers hold a wake, as did Mr. Bertrand. But Mr. Levesque, despite his personal loss, treated the few seats he got as a victory—the start of a parliamentary base for the future independence of Quebec. The reaction of the thousands of supporters who piled into an East End arena to hear Mr. Levesque breathe defiance was illustrative.

Separatism has been shoved into a back seat by Wednesday's election, but its forces are much alive and will be watching like hawks for anything Mr. Bourassa might do that does not succeed.

Letters

Halving Noise Pollution

In your front page article entitled Protesters Protesting (Times, Monday, April 20) you reported that Mrs. de Girolamo "was mainly concerned over behaviour of one officer who ordered demonstrators to move city-owned sound equipment out from under the protection of the arcade into the rain-drenched square." Does this mean that the city is providing help in demonstrations against our country's foreign policy? It's not often one hears of the victim providing the hold-up man with the gun. Why don't we just send a percentage of our taxes straight to the Viet Cong?

I am grateful, however, for the law which denies the protesters the right to shout, while granting it to the street corner evangelists. Illogical, inconsistent and unjust as it is, at least it cuts down the noise pollution by half!—Robert Orr, Mill Bay.

Adding a Dash of Truth

There may be a possible case of a violation of "Truth in Advertising" appearing in your paper.

Should not the various Government of British Columbia advertisements have the following footnote, as is done with advertisements for liquor: "This advertisement is not inserted by, but is paid for by the taxpayers of the Province of British Columbia."

To follow this to a logical (or illogical) conclusion, your reporters should be required to report the provincial government's (orders in council?) disbursement of funds as, "The government approved the expenditure of x dollars for y project. These funds are to be provided by the taxpayers of British Columbia." — P. R. Layard, Ganges.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"SUGAR IS A PENNY EXTRA."

Looking Back

From the Times of April 30, 1910

A complaint has ben lodged with the Times against the alleged disgrace fully dirty condition of the fountain which is maintained by the government, and seldom used for the purpose for which it is assumed to be maintained, in front of the Parliament Buildings. If the provincial health officer is in the city his attention ought to be called to the matter.

Restraint at Western

London Free Press

By settling for a 6 per cent salary increase, University of Western Ontario faculty members have given a convincing demonstration of prudence and restraint. Their responsible action sets an example for other sectors of the economy, where restraint tends to be depreciated as something for others to practice.

Although the faculty members conceded that they were less than elated by the settlement, they judiciously checked self-interest and deferred to external economic conditions. They merit a cheer, however qualified their acceptance of the moderate increase.

It is the second recent occasion on which the campus teachers have bolstered their public esteem. They previously decided to establish a scholarship fund from faculty contributions to reward undergraduate academic excellence. Their lead should be followed at other universities.

Reaction to Militancy

By TIM TRAYNOR
From Washington

THE upsurge of student concern for the environment was eagerly welcomed as a shift to positivism which would ease the strain on hard-pressed schools and universities. It is not turning out that way — or at least not noticeably so. Incident follows incident — a fatal shooting at the University of California at Santa Barbara, firebombings at the University of Kansas, the stoning of the home of the president of Pennsylvania State University, and on down the list from Stanford to Indiana State.

Traynor

In a somewhat symbolic episode, Sen. Edward Kennedy appeared at an "Earth Day" rally and was confronted with demands that he speak out in support of Bobby Seale, the Black Panther leader whose murder trial is taking place in New Haven, where the university is located. (Sen. Kennedy commented only that the violence did not bring change, only repression and suffering.)

In the opinion of Yale President Kingman Brewster, "the malaise, the disenchantment with life" is greater now than a year ago among most American students. There was, he said, a sense that no one in government was moved to "urgent, controversial action," and that leaders were using the alleged complacency of "middle American" to evade challenges.

Another factor was that "the dedication to racial equality is pushed back to the inner limits of constitutional necessity. Even this is grudgingly accepted and narrowly defined."

Black Militant Issue

Of the various issues involved in the university disturbances, none is more central than the accommodation of black militant attitudes and demands. As at Yale, the misadventures of black militants like Mr. Seale impinge on the universities, adding to already great pressures.

On the one side there is a continuing campaign to make special provision for blacks and other minorities as compensation for inferior opportunity, educational and otherwise. The basic demand is that the universities allow free admission, regardless of qualification, or else establish quotas for blacks and other minorities.

Ranged against this development are strong opponents, including Vice-President Spiro Agnew. In another of his controversial speeches, he recently decried the "cluttering" of the universities with under-qualified students as detrimental to academic standards and as "a major cause to campus inefficiency and unrest." He specifically ctiticized the University of Michigan, which has recently accepted demands for a black quota of ten per cent of the student body by 1973.

Agnew Judgment

In Mr. Agnew's words, "any attempt to subordinate the great universities of this county to social goals for which they are ill-designed and ill-equipped can only result in tragic losses to both these institutions and the nation." Rejecting the idea that everyone should have a four-year- college education, he argued for special sub-university colleges to which the under-qualified would be directed, and which would prepare those with ability for university. The placement of an under-qualified student in university meant the displacement of a qualified student, he asserted.

He spoke to a traditionally black Washington high school which, through lowering of standards, had been "sacrificed by the levellers and the ideologists on the altar of educational egalitarianism." The aim should be to advance the "natural aristocracy" through the rigorous demands of intellectual competition, he said.

Proponents of freer black access to universitites were outraged, but there is a growing recognition that Mr. Agnew's attitude is in harmony with conservative university teaching staffs, to say nothing of the public at large.

Lack of Sympathy

Preliminary results of a recently-published survey sponsored by the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education indicate a pronounced lack of sympathy with student militants and many of their causes, among university staff members. On the specific issue of preferred treatment for minorities, less than half of the 60,500 individuals questioned felt that more minority-group members should be admitted to colleges if it meant relaxing normal academic standards. Three-quarters of the sample disagreed that requirements should be relaxed in the hiring of faculty members from minority groups.

While those questioned were generally more liberal than the population at large, they tended to be opposed to such ideas as student control over faculty appointments and the abolition of grades, though there was a tendency to agree that course work should be more relevant to contemporary life and problems.

Over half of the respondents disapproved of student activism in general, and more than 80 per cent held that campus demonstrations by militant students "are a threat to academic freedom." More than 75 per cent agreed, either strongly or with reservations, that students who disrupt the functioning of a college should be expelled or suspended.

All Conflicting Forces in U.S. Come Together in Douglas Dispute

WASHINGTON—The Florida congressman, Robert L. F. Sikes, was bitter and angry when he took the floor of the house after Harrold Carswell's nomination had been rejected.

Some of the liberal and minority groups have the knife out for anyone who does not conform to their ideas of judicial fitness, he said. It was time to take a different approach; it was time to look into the fitness of those already on the court. Just before he sat down, he said:

"Let the knife cut both ways."

Less than a week later, the House was debating whether to impeach Associate Justice William O. Douglas of the United States Supreme Court. Only once in nearly two centuries of U.S. history has a Supreme Court justice been impeached, and that case occurred in 1805.

It is a measure of the seriousness of the opposition to Douglas — and the emotional nature of the case against him — that some of the justice's friends see the real possibility of his being tried in a public forum. They have even begun to think of possible lawyers to defend him.

Building for Year

Despite the suddenness of the move against Douglas, it was not precipitated merely by the passions growing out of the Carswell case. The case against Douglas had been building quietly, systematically and carefully for at least a year. It had been organized and orchestrated from the office of the House minority leader, Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, with assists from public and private sources.

Neither does it represent only a question of possible judicial impropriety. The Douglas case brings together in one explosive package a melange of American issues and attitudes, and thus says as much about the U.S. today as it does about the qualifications of one judge.

By HAYNES JOHNSON

It involves politics, the presidency, liberal and conservative ideology faith in the courts, faith in the law, faith in government, pornography, sex and May-and-December romances, revolutionary actions, governmental ethics, private and public morality, and notions of "good" Americans and "dangerous" Americans.

In the background are ugly allusions to gamblers and slain mobsters and Las Vegas, to ice Pick Willie and Bugsy Siegel and Meyer Lansky, to fears of electronic eavesdropping extending even into the Supreme Court.

Pacemaker in Heart

At the centre of the controversy stands a white-haired 71-year-old man with a craggy, lined face and an electronic pacemaker implanted in his heart to regulate his heart beat.

William O. Douglas, conservationist, hiker, writer, world traveller, civil libertarian, married four times, the last three to girls young enough to be his daughters, and for 31 years a Supreme Court justice, has been one of America's most outspoken men. Few justices have ever had such an impact on so many areas of American life, few have aroused such antagonisms.

His friends see the attack on him as part of a deliberate campaign to stifle dissent in America and affect the functioning of the highest court and third branch of government.

His critics see him as a man who has betrayed his trust, as a model of hypocrisy.

There is no neutral ground.

Although Douglas has long been the object of attack for his views and actions on and off the bench (the first move to impeach him came in 1953 during the Joseph R. McCarthy era), the present effort is by far the most serious. It began in earnest a year ago in the aftermath of the "second Fortas affair."

Abe Fortas, who already had failed to become the chief justice as President Lyndon Johnson desired, resigned from the court in the spring of 1969 after coming under severe attack over revelations concerning his relations with Louis Wolfson, the financier. It was the first time a justice had resigned under a shadow of impropriety.

The public debate over Fortas and his association with foundations and fees extended to Douglas' conduct and private business associations. Douglas, too, received foundation money. Members of Congress began receiving a considerable amount of mail critical of Douglas. Gerald R. Ford was one who was impressed at the response. He decided to examine the allegations. His staff began its investigation.

The investigation was proceeding quietly until the fight last fall over the Supreme Court nomination of Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. of South Carolina. At that point, Ford himself suffered an embarrassment. A Washington reporter learned of the Douglas investigation and asked Ford point-blank about it.

Ford, understandably, wanted to keep his investigation out of the public arena—and particularly so at a time when the president and leader of his party was facing a major fight over his Supreme Court choice.

Intensify Bitterness

News that a key Republican congressman was looking into a liberal sitting justice appointed by a Democrat might harm Haynsworth's chances. But, faced with either confirming or denying the report, Ford said it was true. He was looking into Douglas.

The resulting publicity did not help Haynsworth, but neither did it stop the Douglas investigation. If anything, Haynsworth's defeat intensified the bitterness among many conservatives. It strengthened their determination to do something about Douglas.

Ford's investigation continued. He found new allies. One of them was Rep. Louis C. Wyman, a Republican from New Hampshire.

Wyman says he had been troubled for some time by the allegations against Douglas. "It bothered me as a lawyer," he said.

Wyman read Douglas' newest book, Points of Rebellion, in which Douglas deals directly with one of the most divisive national issues today—revolution. Wyman was upset.

One of the passages that particularly bothered him was a comparison between George III, the American Revolution and the America of the present. Douglas wrote:

"George III and his dynasty had established and nurtured us . . . but a vast restructuring of laws and institutions was necessary if people were to be content. That restructuring was not forthcoming and there was revolution. We must realize that today's establishment is the new George III. Whether it will continue to adhere to his tactics, we do not know. If it does, the redress, honored in tradition, is also revolution."

Wyman began drafting a resolution spelling out the need to investigate Douglas with a possible view to impeachment.

But the Carswell case intervened. Again, it was considered politically unwise to take any move against another justice while the Senate was considering the fate of the latest presidential nomination.

When Carswell went down to a stunning defeat on April 8, conservative tempers flared all over Washington. Rep. Wyman says he went to "Jerry and others and said 'I want to go ahead with the Douglas matter'."

Met Congressmen

Ford deliberated for several days. On Monday, April 13, Ford met with several key congressmen in the Capitol.

Ford told them he intended to lay out, publicly, his probable case against Douglas in a speech later that week. He also said he favored an investigation rather than impeachment.

That set the stage for Ford's long speech Wednesday night, April 15, in the House of Representatives.

William O. Douglas and wife Cathy pause during hike last weekend

But before that, one other incident had served as a catalyst for many who were wavering about Douglas. The April issue of Evergreen magazine appeared on the newsstands in Washington.

The magazine published part of Douglas' new book on revolution, but it wasn't the justice's words that set off the furor, it was their juxtaposition to other material.

Centre-Piece Nudes

There was a full-page caricature of Richard Nixon made to look like George III. There was an article by Tom Hayden on repression and rebellion. But the centrepiece was the object of most attention. A seven-page rotogravure section printed 13 half-page photographs of nudes. Men and women were embracing, making love. Genitals were clearly shown. As Ford later told the Congress:

"There are nude models of both sexes in poses that are perhaps more shocking than the postcards that used to be sold in the back alleys of Paris and Panama City, Panama."

An associate says Douglas didn't know the article was going to be published in such a context, but even if he had he would not have tried to suppress it on the grounds of his long-standing views about freedom of expression. To his foes, Evergreen offered final proof of Douglas' misconduct. It was the last straw for those who already disliked Douglas for everything from his attitudes to his lifestyle and his personal behavior.

Ford's speech and the remarks given later on the House floor conveyed an air of outrage coupled with a sense of vengeance. It was, in its way, something of a Roman circus atmosphere on Capitol Hill.

Ford spelled out the case against Douglas: his former connection with the Albert Parvin Foundation, his salary of $12,000 a year from Parvin; Parvin's association with "his silent partners of the international gambling fraternity;" Douglas' association with the "leftish Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions."

The heart of the comments, though, centered not on Douglas' judicial qualifications or professional and personal associations. It was what Douglas represented as a person, and the ideas that he espoused, that seemed to trigger the most emotion.

Ford spoke of Douglas' "involvement with pornographic publications and espousal of hippie-yippie style revolution," of his "outrageous" actions "in the faces of decent Americans for years." Ford claimed to represent "the patriotic and law-abiding and God-fearing people of America."

Others sounded the same notes.

Ironically, animosities aroused today over Douglas are over personal questions, but it is in the field of constitutional law that Douglas' reputation rests.

As the successor to Louis Brandeis on the bench, Douglas for 31 years has become one of the nation's most outspoken dissenters. His opinions have been sharply recorded ever since Franklin Roosevelt appointed him to the court in 1939. Over the years, he has remained outspoken. His decisions put him on the side of strict enforcement of anti-trust laws, against discrimination whether of race or religion or sex or the background of poverty.

Change Direction

He has been a vigorous advocate for strict construction of the first amendment, insisting that government can never abridge a man's right to speak his mind or worship his God in his own way, and without interference by government.

But the Douglas case represents something that transcends his own career. It comes at a moment when the nation is undergoing stress. Part of it is reflected in the desire from the president and many citizens to change the direction of the highest tribunal.

Part stems from bitter disputes over new styles of life, new freedoms challenging old traditions, new political movements clashing with established orders, a new generation pitted against the old.

Douglas, ironically perhaps in view of his age, is a symbol of much of the dissent and dissonance sweeping young America today.

Lenin Would Be Angered

Manchester Guardian

Lenin would not have approved of the fanfare, the eulogy, and the sycophancy that surrounded his centenary last week.

In all the speculation about his likely attitude to today's world, if he were to step out of his glass coffin into Red Square, that is one safe assumption. He would have been revolted to find himself an ikon.

The deference, the self-abasement, the humiliation of workers and peasants outraged him in the Russia of his boyhood. To liberate people from mystification and superstition was a main aim of his life's work.

★ ★ ★

So he would have been angered at the way his own writings have been made an ikon too, like a body of received and quasi-religious dogma, or a quarry to which his successors in the Soviet Union have turned to dig out any quotation to justify their current policy.

Lenin was nothing if not a pragmatist. He was a superlative tactician. In April, 1917, when he returned from Switzerland and startled his fellow Bolsheviks with the demand that they unequivocally condemn the war and the Provisional Government, most of them thought the poor fellow had lost touch with reality because of his long absence abroad.

LENIN
. . . too much fuss

In October when Lenin argued that the time was ripe for armed uprising many thought he was being foolish and rash. Yet both decisions were proved emphatically right.

His views and writings are not Mosaic tablets, but were linked to concrete situations at concrete moments.

Lenin was a rare combination of a clever theorist who had at the same time a brilliant flair for practical action.

His determination to lift the working class to power in Europe was indeed single-minded and monolithic — a goal for which Lenin was prepared to make a greater personal sacrifice than most men, in years of exile and wandering from one dreary lodging-house to another. But his tactics were infinitely varied.

It is this that makes it hard to speculate on Lenin's likely attitude today. As a Marxist he would have argued that historical circumstances are more powerful than the force of one man's personality.

★ ★ ★

To say that the mistakes and crimes of Russian policy in the thirties and forties were due to Stalin's personality, Lenin would have put down as sloppy thinking at best, a deliberate attempt to avoid the issue at worst.

He would have wanted to know how and why the forced collectivisation, the purges, and the secret trials took place.

He would have wanted to know why even now tens of thousands of Russians are in labour camps, and others in special psychiatric hospitals. He would probably have read Solzhenitsyn's "The First Circle" with horror.

At the time of the civil war, when Russia was invaded also by the West, Lenin was prepared to destroy civil and political liberties.

But at the end of his life there were signs that he was worried by this, by the increasing bureaucracy in the party, by the "Great Russian Chauvinism" which led to the forced annexation of Georgia.

He was never, of course, a liberal, and believed in the need for the subordination of the individual to the collective when the two clash.

But he would surely have questioned whether in the Soviet Union of today such circumstances applied so rigorously.

He might have been disappointed that the standard of living remains so low.

He would have been unhappy at the creation of a new class of privileged bureaucrats and apparatchiks with access to their own special shops, able to pass on money and savings to their children in their wills, enjoying an inflated style of life at State expense.

★ ★ ★

Russia's achievement in cutting the grosser capitalist contradictions of wealth and poverty would probably not be acceptable to him as an excuse for the rise of a new class.

On the international front, he would no doubt be pleased that the Soviet Union has survived. In his lifetime he was acutely conscious of the massive external and internal threats to the new republic. But he would surely be disturbed at the Soviet Union's image abroad.

Maxim Gorky, in his fond description of him, once wrote that in Lenin's favourite posture, standing with head thrown back and hands tucked in his waistcoat under his armpits "there was something delightfully comical, triumphantly cocky."

Triumphantly cocky — no two words could be less apposite to Russia's current image of tired and stodgy conservatism.

★ ★ ★

Would Lenin not be disturbed at the Brezhnev doctrine and the invasion of Czechoslovakia? Would he not be more likely to say, with the Rumanians or the Communists of Western Europe or the Third World, that there are several roads to socialism, appropriate to each country's needs and circumstances?

No one country has a monopoly of experience.

In the broadest sense, Lenin's contribution to world history has been to challenge laissez-faire, to say "no" to colonialism, to erect the scientific humanist alternative of a rational and planned society in place of the endless treadmill of superstition and underdevelopment to which millions are still condemned.

Must We Be Anti-American?

By BRUCE WEST

Now that we're in a hassle with the United States over navigational rights through our Arctic waters, the coat-holding American-haters in this country are at it again.

They will not be satisfied, I suppose, until open hostility exists between ourselves and our U.S. neighbors.

If this ever takes place, it will be tragic, because there is no need for it. There are no problems in our relations with the United States which can't be settled in an atmosphere of mutual friendship and respect.

The problems exist, of course, and will continue to do so as long as we share a common border with the world's most powerful and energetic nation. But they're not likely to be settled in satisfactory manner by strutting up and down our side of the border with a national chip on our shoulders.

There seems to be something so snappy and snarly and juvenile about those who are now industriously trying to foster animosity in this country toward the United States.

They personify some of the worst aspects of the great Canadian inferiority complex.

When will we ever learn that it is quite possible to have both a certain respect and even affection for the founders of this country and a friendly feeling toward our U.S. neighbors without sacrificing a grain of Canadian pride and identity?

●

The other day Peter Newman, editor of the Toronto Daily Star, was quoted as saying it was impossible to be a "patriotic Canadian" without being anti-American! It was distressing to see such sentiments being expressed by one who has been a keen student of Canadian affairs and is now in a position to greatly influence Canadian opinion.

It is my belief there are many Canadians who would resent this statement and would take precisely the opposite view to that of Mr. Newman. They might hold, for instance, that there is something questionable about the real depth and confidence of a person's Canadianism if he must constantly bolster it by running down his next-door neighbors.

Certainly it would be hard to admire an individual who resorted to this means of building up his own image of himself. And should such an attitude become a national Canadian trait, it would be truly regrettable.

By all means let us be firm in our dealings with the Americans. But let our firmness be the healthy kind that indicates confidence in ourselves. Let it not be the kind that is diluted and made suspect by nattering and sniping and petty spites.

When I put my feet up to have a chat with my neighbor from Iowa or Ohio or Illinois, I do so with the greatest of goodwill. I feel this way toward him because I in no way feel inferior to him.

I have a notion we both could learn quite a bit from each other, provided we meet with a certain amount of mutual trust. If it's better that way on the personal level, it's better that way internationally.

And I believe a lot of Canadians feel the same way regardless of what some of our more feverish patriots may have to say about the matter.

LIKE SARDINES in a tin, vessels of the Canadian hydrographic service and the department of transport jostle for room while being readied for the season ahead. In the foreground can be seen the portside of the William J. Stewart as she looms down on two hydrographic launches, a DOT landing barge, a DOT oceanographic launch and the 36-foot survey launch Revisor. Behind them, with coast guard vessel Camsell forming a backdrop, are the DOT's Relite, a new coast guard lifeboat, to be used at Bamfield, and the Rider, the former fisheries vessel Hunter Point, which is being converted and refitted as a coast guard cutter. Major Leap in Symphony Attendance

The music-loving public accounts for 84 per cent use of the combined rental times of the Royal and McPherson theatres, a Victoria Symphony Society board meeting disclosed this week.

Attendance at symphony concerts and attractions during the 1969-70 season was 33,094 — a gigantic leap upward in attendance that has been steadily recorded since the low point of 1966-67, an all-guest-conducted season.

Another record has been established at the box office in early subscription renewals. To date these stand at 1,015.

Those who wish to retain their present seat for either the full season or "choice" series of symphony concerts have until May 16 to make their reservation.

Annual meeting of the Symphony Society will be held in Dunlp House, 1960 Lansdowne Road, on June 15 at 8 p.m. All season ticket holders may attend this meeting.

Among plans for next season, which includes the usual number of concerts and recitals as well as special attractions, the board is surveying the society's role in musical education and hopes to provide more symphony programs for schools.

Library 'Depressing'; Facelift Said Needed

Despite recent changes aimed at a more efficient operation, the Greater Victoria Public Library needs more work done — both to its physical appearance and to the organization of its staff.

This was the feeling at Tuesday's library board meeting, where Trustee Alfred Hood called the interior of the building at Blanshard and Yates "depressing" and said it was badly in need of a facelifting.

Hood said there have been complaints that the Yates Street doors were not adequate for the amount of traffic going through them and that they were too heavy for elderly people.

ROOF LEAKS

He said repairs were needed for steps and railings, that the downstairs of the library needed redecorating and that the roof leaks.

"We could go through this building and probably come up with a bill of several thousand dollars," he said.

The board approved his proposal that a thorough inspection of the building be made and that the costs of repair be assessed.

Hood suggested the mayors of greater Victoria be taken on a tour too, in case the library had to turn to the municipalities for funds.

"We can probably get the engineers and our people down here quickly enought, he said, "but I don't know how fast we'll get the mayors."

A $12,000 survey by Woods, Gordon Ltd, which recommended many changes in the operation of the library, came under sharp attack for its assessment of staff requirements.

Chief librarian John Lort said the survey people had "no real knowledge" of the library's operation before they made the staff assessment.

Lort termed "unrealistic" a cutting of staff from the present 85 down to 69 and said "Like many things in the report, it was not thought through."

Trustee Alan Newberry said that accurate or not, the report was the basis of board decision and that if the recommendation was wrong, then the whole staff question should be reconsidered.

The peronnel and survey committees were then appointed to consider what Trustee Gordon Walker called "a basic difference of opinion between what the experts think and what those who run this operation think."

Until some conclusions are reached, the board will delay hiring another staff member for the bookmobile.

The board has, however, hired a new children's librarian, 41-year-old Ann O'Brien. Mrs. O'Brien now lives at Cobble Hill and holds degrees in history and library science, speaks several languages and has worked in four library systems. She will begin work in Victoria early in May.

The library services required in greater Victoria over the next five years were outlined in a report given to board members.

Plans call for two new branches in Saanich by 1972, a small rental service for James Bay, a telecommunications system with other libraries in 1973, a Royal Oak branch in 1973 and a new branch in Oak Bay in 1974. The possibility of amalgamation with the Vancouver Island Regional library in 1974 was also discussed.

Rotten Aroma Rising From Happy Valley Chips

Wood chips are being dumped in Langford, polluting a creek and producing a "smell like rotten cabbage at times," the Capital Regional District was told Wednesday.

Langford director Earl Pallister said peat-type soil is being excavated on a private property and sold, with wood chips being used as fill. A nearby creek which used to have fish now is "dead and smelly."

He produced a bottle of murky-brown water and put it on the table before other board directors.

"I know we are doing a solid waste disposal study, but we should do something now," he said.

CURTIS

"If you were a municipality you could introduce a bylaw to prohibit this," said board chairman Hugh Curtis, mayor of Saanich.

Sooke director Howard Elder said a chemical change occurs with wood chips when ground water gets into the fill and rain water soaks in.

POLLUTION ACT

District engineer Bill Gerry said this kind of problem is covered by the Pollution Control Act and the Health Act.

Board directors authorized the chairman to report the problem to the Pollution Control Board and the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

Capital Region Asks Authority For Approval of Subdivisions

The approving officer for subdivisions in the non-municipal areas of southern Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands may soon be Tony Roberts, regional planning director.

Directors of the Capital Regional District agreed Wednesday to ask the provincial government to transfer this responsibility from the highways department to Roberts.

The regional district earlier took over from the provincial government responsibility for existing regulations to control subdivision in non-municipal, or unorganized, areas and has power to enact new regulations.

●

The approving officer for the implementation of such regulations, however, is still the highways department.

District executive director Bill Long said the highways department will still be involved in road standards because it must maintain them in the future.

He said that hopefully, in the future, there will be an improvement in the standard of subdivision.

Board directors also gave final reading to a new building bylaw, which replaces existing regulations in the unorganized areas and increases permit fees.

●

New officers have been established at 696 Goldstream Avenue and new staff will be added to bolster the lone building inspector.

In other business, the board:

● Accepted Saanich's offer of 56-acre Bear Hill Park for a nominal $1, with the board to plan acquisition of land to link it with Elk-Beaver Lake Park;

● Opposed installation of overhead electrical transmission lines in urban and developing-urban areas of the province.

Tight Money Melts Plans

Plans for an ice arena adjoining the centennial swimming pool in Colwood melted Wednesday.

The Capital Regional District received a letter from J. D. Baird, deputy municipal affairs minister, saying that during "this period of extortionate interest rates and dearth of investment monies" he is not prepared to consider approval for non-essential items.

"With the critical needs in the Captital Regional District for sewerage, sewage disposal and hospital beds, I will not approve borrowing for a Centennial project for the Colwood, Metchosin and Langford areas unless such borrowing is a minor protion of the total cost of the project," he said.

$650,000

The joint centennial committee in the unorganized area had requested approval in principle from the regional district for the arena, costing $650,000, and asking for the necessary approval from the municipal affairs department.

Richard Emery, Colwood's director on the regional board, said "I guess we'll have to gather other ideas and strike out again."

Key to Wildlife Kill May Be in Sand Sample

KING SALMON, Alaska (AP) —Beach sand coated with a strange waxy-like substance and bags of bird feathers may hold the key to what caused a mysterious mass wildlife kill on the Alaska Peninsula coast.

Speculation ranged from starvation to an oil spill.

The sand and feathers were sent to a federal laboratory in Portland, where officials said Wednesday tests would be started immediately and results should be available by Monday.

James A. Anderegg, director of the state division of environmental health, examined some of the sand in Juneau.

"It appeared to have some kind of a waxy substance, not really oily," he said. "It has a dry paraffin feel if there is such a thing.

"There was no oil sheen when we threw it (the sand) in water."

Anderegg said he asked the water quality administration laboratory in Portland two thing about the waxy substance: "One, is it of petroleum origin? Two, if not, can you give us any idea what it is?"

Anderegg said, however, if the contaminant responsible for the massive kill was a volatile material "it has probably long since gone off and will be difficult to identify."

He said other specimens were received at Juneau Wednesday for examination, including a dead seal and whole birds which had been frozen to preserve them.

TOTAL CLIMBS

How many birds and other sea life died? Ray Morris, a federal oil pollution expert, said possibly as many as 1,000,000.

Morris said his earlier estimate of 86,000 murres killed might be in error "by as much as a factor of 10 . . . there may be as many as 800 or a million birds killed."

Morris said the birds were swept ashore by a violent storm in the Bering Sea last week but nearly all the carcasses had been carried away by rising tides and two days of offshore winds.

"If I hadn't seen the birds piled up on the beaches, I'd find it hard to believe anything had happened," he said. Dozens of seals or sea lions also were found dead or dying.

The starvation theory was advanced by Jim Faro, an Alaska department of fish and game official who investigated the mysterious death of murres in northern California two years ago. He said the Alaska birds had almost no meat on their breasts and "it appears they hadn't been eating."

The dead birds and waxy sand were found along nearly 500 miles of Bering Sea coastline from Unimak Island in the Aleutians to Egegik Bay on the Alaska Peninsula.

Oil sheens spotted in the area were blamed first for the loss of wildlife. But the coast guard said Wednesday that it "found no evidence of oil or oil pollution" when it picked up six dead seals and two dead sea lions Tuesday.

Association Says Workers May Leave

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian construction Association said today the government may encourage an exodus of key construction workers to the United States if it raises middle-income tax rate in Canada.

In briefs prepared for the Commons and Senate committees studying Finance Minister Edgar Benson's white paper proposals for tax change, the association also calls for the abolition of estate and gift taxes when the new income tax plan goes into effect.

Construction industry personnel have "above-average mobility in employment," and there now is a shortage of trained construction workers in the United States, the brief says.

Wages and salaries in general were appreciably higher, and taxes lower in the U.S. than in Canada, and a good many Canadian workers have emigrated.

The white paper's plan to raise taxes on incomes of the $12,000- to $25,000-a-year income group "is viewed with particular concern in that it would increase further the existing differential in income after taxes, and encourage more construction personnel to emigrate," the association said.

LARGEST INDUSTRY

Construction now is Canada's largest industry, with an estimated output of $13,900,000,000 this year.

The association of construction employers said it had called last year for no action on new estate and gift taxes until there was general income tax revision. Now, it said, estate and gift taxes cannot be excluded from Parliament's study of income tax rates.

"Construction companies are typically family- or closely-held firms, incorporated, short on liquid assets, and dependent upon their own resources for capital expansion and business growth," says a letter signed by R. G. Saunders of Vancouver, association president.

These facts, along with the mobility of construction labor, should be kept in mind when studying the tax change proposals, the letter adds.

Committee to Review Commission's Findings

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons sits today only for the 40-minute daily question period.

But it isn't a day off for MPs. Immediately after leaving the House they will scatter to eight Commons committees to tackle a heavy load of work.

On Wednesday, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford proposed in the Commons setting up a joint House-Senate committee to review the work of the prices and incomes commission.

Mr. Basford said the committee could scrutinize commission reports and research studies and voice its opinion on these efforts. The commission could also call witnesses from industry and labor to speak on the commission's work.

He said the commission now was investigating price increases in 40 different products ranging from fine papers to peanut butter. These should be studied by the joint committee.

Mr. Basford said Canada had a lower rate of increase in the cost of living in 1969 than Japan, Britain, the U.S. and France. He said there are signs the rate of inflation in Canada is moderating.

Marvin Howe (PC—Wellington-Grey) urged the government to reduce taxation and lower the cost of living.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said the cost of living in Canada has risen sharply since 1966. He said it increased 3.6 per cent in 1966; 4.1 per cent in 1968 and 4.6 per cent in 1969.

The government should consider changing its policies of restraint rather than suggesting a new committee, he said.

William Skoreyko (PC—Edmonton East) said compulsory wage-price controls would be more effective than the voluntary guides suggested by the government.

Canadians Deplete Strike Fund

TORONTO (CP) — The reserve strike fund of the United Steelworkers of America in the United States has been greatly weakened by massive Canadian deductions and Canadian workers must start paying their own way, says William Mahoney, Canadian director of the union.

Canadian members drew $8,109,000 more from the strike fund in 1968 and 1969 than they paid into it, Mr. Mahoney said in the current issue of Steel Labor, the union's publication.

A financial accounting of the fund shows that since its inception in 1968 Canadians paid $4,170,540 into it and drew out $12,279,385.

Most of the strike fund assistance was paid out in 1969—a year of big strikes in iron ore, basic steel industries and at the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd.

The strike fund is made up of payments representing one-third of monthly union dues in excess of $5 a month. Dues are based on two hours' pay a month, with $5 minimum and a $10 ceiling.

The report in Steel Labor said the large subsidy from U.S. members enabled Canadian members to make massive breakthroughs on the wage front in 1969 but left the reserves of the members in the United States weakened at a time when more than 500,000 of them face bargaining with the U.S. basic steel and non-ferrous metal industries.

The strike fund is expected to be a major issue at the Steelworkers' national policy conference in Edmonton May 14-15.

Nagas Kill 14

JORHAT, India (Reuters — Armed Naga guerrillas ambushed an Indian army convoy and killed 14 men, including a major, last Sunday, a delayed report received in this army town said Wednesday. The guerrilla tribesmen also kidnapped seven army personnel after the ambush.

Rathtrevor Park to Open Despite Development Work

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Rathtrevor Provincial Park just south of Parksville, with one of the finest beaches for swimming on the Pacific Coast, will be open as usual this season.

B.C. parks branch had considered closing the 859-acre park for campers because of the major development program now under way.

"We are going ahead with the project," said Gordon Macnab, chief of park planning, "but it won't interfere with campers."

Last summer 46,000 camped in the park while the number of day visitors totaled 53,000.

Park officials expect the number of day visitors to double this year as the six-year-old park becomes more widely known.

Campers will be located in an open field instead of the immediate waterfront area as the latter is being turned into a picnic area with parking facilities.

The field will have about 130 sites for tent trailers, travel trailers or tents.

But next year the campsite will be located on the north side of the park and the field turned into a recreational-picnic area. Camping units will number between 130 and 150.

Macnab said trails are being developed and next year flush toilets will be installed to replace the open-pit type.

"We could lay out about 1,500 camp units in the park and end up with a town with a population of 5,000," he said. "We want to avoid this. It would destroy the ecology of the region and there would be pollution and other problems to cope with."

Work in the park is being done under the young men's conservation scheme — a program set up by Welfare Minister P. A. Gaglardi to provide temporary jobs to youths just out of school.

They are trained on how to operate and repair heavy machinery. They are paid $10 a day and get free board and lodgings at the campsite.

Gov't Stand On Merger Due Soon

NANAIMO — Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell next Wednesday is expected to say whether he is in favor of a regional district report recommending amalgamation of Nanaimo and five surrounding areas.

The report urged the union of Nanaimo, Wellington, Departure Bay, Northfield, Harewood and Chase River.

Campbell will address the Chamber of Commerce on the subject and discuss the report at a press conference on the same day.

Regional district planner Vic Grimson said Newcastle Island was not included because it is a provincial park. Protection Island is excluded because it is an island and "almost a separate entity."

He said Gabriola Island might be considered at some later date if a bridge is built.

★ ★ ★

NANAIMO — Finance chairman Ald. G. L. Hall told Nanaimo council that the defeat of the school referendum helped keep the 1970 mill rate at 82.26 mills.

Council adopted a budget of $5,887,246 and Mayor Frank Ney said the increase in the homeowner grant from $150 to $160 would mean, with the mill rate staying the same, taxpayers would see a slight reduction in taxes.

The city estimates that $1,516,747 will be collected in property taxes and $1,200,000 will be added in grants from senior governments.

Local Patients To Get Priority

DUNCAN — The 50-bed extended-care unit to be built alongside Cowichan District Hospital will serve patients from the immediate area first, says hospital administrator Ken Noton.

He said that Health Minister Ralph Loffmark had indicated the hospital would not have to admit patients from other regions if there was a waiting list of local patients.

The extended-care facilities, which will be of concrete and cost $1,076,555, will serve an area which includes Ladysmith, Chemainus, Lake Cowichan, Duncan and south from these communities to the Malahat.

Extended-care patients are elderly for the most part, bedridden with chronic illnesses which require constant nursing rather than regular attention from a doctor.

Indian Residence For Tofino

A 100-bed residence will be built near Tofino by September, 1971, to house west coast Indian students attending provincial schools there, the Indian Affairs Department confirmed Wednesday.

Tenders have not yet been called for the $1½ million residence.

Fred Clark, regional IAD director for B.C.-Yukon, said in Vancouver the Tofino MLA and MP had geen told of the decision a month ago.

News of the residence plan came in a report from Ucluelet which said Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien notified Barney Williams of the provincial Indian Advisory Board.

TREE SURGEON ELECTROCUTED

COURTENAY — The death of 47-year-old Charles Knowles, a tree surgeon, was due to electrocution, a coroner's jury decided Tuesday.

"We feel that use of new equipment and over-confidence in himself and in his trade resulted in his accidental death," the jury said.

The accident occurred when Knowles was taking a tree down at Kye Bay.

Regional districts on Vancouver Island will hold a meeting of technical advisers to see what can be done about unsightliness along the Trans-Canada Highway and Island Highway.

The Capital Regional District will send its executive director, Bill Long, and possibly one or two others to the meeting, expected to be held in Nanaimo in the near future.

Board chairman Hugh Curtis said the condition of the highway is "particularly distressing" and seems to be deteriorating.

He had written the mayors of Duncan and Ladysmith and received a "positive reaction" for the need for some sort of control.

This would have to be broader than a municipality because most of the ribbon-development is taking place outside cities and districts.

He said trailer camps, lumbering operations, service stations, junk car dumps and generally unsightly premises are enlarging along much of the highway and threaten in some places to form a continuous string of "less than desirable vistas."

Texaco

Consolidated net income of Texaco Inc. for the first quarter of 1970 totalled $205.4 million, or 2.7 per cent above earnings of $200 million, for the first three months of 1969.

On a per-share basis, first-quarter earnings in 1970 amounted to 75 cents, compared with 73 cents for the first quarter last year.

Texaco's consolidated gross income for the first quarter increased 7.3 per cent to $1.65 million.

Maclean-Hunter

Maclean-Hunter Ltd. reported net earnings for the first-quarter ended March 31 of $836,000 or 21 cents a share compared with $776,000 or 19 cents in the similar 1969 period.

Earnings included a special profit of $155,000 from land expropriation.

Maclean-Hunter Cable TV Ltd., a subsidiary, reported net profit of $70,086 or four cents a share for the three-month period compared with $33,070 or three cents in the corresponding 1970 period.

Dominion Stores

Dominion Stores Ltd. reports increased sales for the year ended March 21, but a slight drop in profits.

Profit for the year was $9.3 million or $1.15 a share, down from $9.5 or $1.17 a share the previous year.

Sales increased 8 per cent to a record $651.6 million. The company said it had absorbed cost increasef to maimtain lower selling prices.

TransCanada

TransCanada PipeLines reports net profit of $5.95 million or 55 cents a share for the first quarter of 1970, up from $5.69 million or 52 cents a share for the corresponding period of 1969.

Chairman James W. Kerr said in a report to shareholders that operating revenue for the period was up 17 per cent to $70.66 million from $60.15 million in the first quarter of 1969.

Clarepine

Clarepine Developments, Ltd. of Edmonton has been reinstated for trading on the Calgary Stock Exchange after a short suspension.

The voluntary suspension came during clarification of company affairs after Clarepine was disclosed to have joined with two other firms in the development of silica sand near Edmonton.

Clarepine has agreed with Planet Ore Purifiers Ltd. and Canada Peat Moss Products Ltd. to form Sil Silica Ltd. with Clarepine holding 50.1 per cent of the stock.

JAPANESE MARKET IN PLUNGE

TOKYO (Reuters) — The Tokyo stock exchange today saw the heaviest plunge in its history, with its average tumbling by nearly nine per cent.

Many Japanese investors rushed to liquidate their stock-holdings, when the market opened after a national holiday Wednesday.

Leading securities firms reported overseas investors continued to sell, some of them placing "sell at any price" orders.

A total of 190,000,000 shares changed hands.

Growers' Wine Profits, Sales Show Increase

Threat of recession should not faze owners of wine stocks, shareholders of Growers' Wine Co. Ltd. were told at their annual meeting in Victoria Wednesday.

Lawrence L. Anderson, Jr. president for the last year, reported a 27 per cent increase in earnings based on 17 per cent improvement in sales for the 12 months ended Dec. 31, 1969.

He told 43 stockholders attending the meeting between rows of underground aging vats that consideration was being given to the value of their shares.

Anderson said the company was using its cash flow internally to produce earnings improvement, thus raising the value of shares.

POLICY OUTLINED

His printed report said company policy is to "make rapid and significant increases in profitability without in any way diminishing our excellent prospects for long term profitability and growth in the exciting and rapidly developing wine industry."

Besides introducing new lines, expanding warehouse and bottling facilities, closing the Vancouver sales office to centralize all sales efforts, the company had divested itself of non-productive assets, Anderson reported.

These included a warehouse in Vancouver, at an annual saving in overhead of $25,000. Growers' also granted an option on Logana Farms, Central Saanich property now idle, and offered for sale MacKenzie Avenue property in Saanich and Beau Seiour vineyards in the Okanagan.

The meeting was disturbed briefly by director E. C. Warner, who was booed and shouted down then ruled out of order when he tried to make a speech.

"I hate you," a woman shareholder spat at Warner, who alleged the Beau Sejour vinyard had lost $200,000 and that Anderson was one of the directors who four years ago agreed to buy it. The price was $480,000 and it is now being offered for $650,000.

Anderson said the improved earnings were achieved despite higher borrowing costs and heavy losses in the Beau Seiour vinevards during the cold winter of 1968-69.

Gross sales of $5.2 million compared with $4.4 million a year ago, on $1.8 million and $1.5 million net sales.

Net earnings amounted to $150,047 after taxes, compared with $118,495, or 11.3 cents per class A share against 8.7 cents. Retained earnings at year-end were $2.2 million, up $200,000.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Auditor's Role an Important One

(This is a service of the Times and of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, CA

Every company in Canada is required by the statute under which it is incorporated, whether federal or provincial, to undergo an annual audit.

It does not necessarily follow that an audit is made of every company. In small, closely held companies the few persons who have any interest in the business might decide that they do not need an auditor to examine their records and, if no one else is concerned, no audit is made.

No one forces an audit upon a business that does not need it, but the statutory requirement is provided for the protection of anyone whose interests might be affected by any misstatement of a company's financial affairs.

The auditor is responsible directly to the shareholders of a company. He is appointed by them in their annual meeting and he is required to report to them. He is not governed by the management, the officers, or the board of directors.

His function is to examine the accounts and records of the company and report whether, in his opinion, the financial statements present fairly the financial condition of the company at the end of its fiscal year and the results of the operations for that year.

If for any reason the auditor is unable to obtain all of the explanations he requires, or his examination is limited in any way, he is obliged to reveal the fact. Or, if he is not satisfied with the content or the consistency in accounting presentation, he must say so. Then in stating his opinion he will make it subject to the qualification for the points upon which he disagrees.

He does not report upon the prudence of management or upon the quality of the company as an investment. These matters are for the investors to decide, based upon their reliance that the facts as presented in the financial statements are dependable, provided that the auditor has so stated without any exceptions or restrictive clauses in his report.

Any person may be appointed as an auditor regardless of his competence or training. It is rare, however, for anyone other than a qualified accountant to accept such an appointment and it would be simply unwise for the shareholders to rely upon the opinion of any unqualified person.

Most company audits in Canada are carried out by the members of the Institute of Chartered Accounts of the various provinces. Therein lies the greatest assurance for the accuracy and reliability of company fiancial statements because all chartered accountants are subject to the most strict discipline in their training, and the application of their skills in practice, and are bound by their strong code of professional ethics.

$45 Million Pulp Mill For Ontario

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (CP) — Ontario-Minnesota Pulp and Paper Co., Ltd., has announced it will build and operate a new $45,000,000 kraft pulp mill here.

Juan Del Valle, company president, said construction will begin in May on a site adjacent to the company's existing pulp and paper mill. He said the new plant is scheduled to begin production in late 1971.

The Canadian company is a subsidiary of Boise Cascade Corp., which operates a paper mill in International Falls, Minn., across the Rainy River from Fort Frances.

A company announcement said the new facilities will produce 500 tons a day of fully-bleached and semi-bleached kraft papers, most of which will be used by company mills at Fort Frances, Kenora, Ont., and International Falls.

City Realtors Set Attendance At Annual Meet

A national perspective on Canadian real estate will be given next month by the industry's top spokesman when the Real Institute of B.C. meets at Harrison Hot Springs.

More than 23 Victoria realtors are expected to attend the B.C. group's convention May 3-5 on the theme Realtor Involvement in the 70s.

Norman MacFarlane, CAREB president, will speak on Real Estate—National Perspective, and Dean P. H. White, of University of B.C. faculty of commerce and business administration, will describe Changes in Real Estate Education.

Visiting speaker Dr. James J. Cribben, professor of management in the graduate division of St. Johns University, New York, will conduct discussion on Momentum Through Motivation.

Auto Insurance Plan Assaulted

WINNIPEG (CP) — Shock waves from a massive demonstration outside the Manitoba legislature extended into the chamber Wednesday as opposition MLAs launched an attack on the New Democratic Party government's proposed automobile insurance legislation.

A move to adjourn the house to debate the question was ruled out of order by speaker Ben Hanuschak, who then had his ruling tested by the opposition.

He was upheld by a narrow 27 to 25 vote, but it did not prevent the opposition from debating the issue through a prolonged question period and a series of personal grievances.

As far as the opposition was concerned, the issue at stake was that the government has not yet firmly indicated in the legislature what course it intends to follow in automobile insurance legislation.

REPORT TABLED

A report from the three-member automobile insurance committee was tabled in the legislature last week, and recommends a compulsory basic program to be run by a crown corporation, with private companies selling additional coverage not provided in the baisic plan.

In speaking to demonstrators, estimated by police as between 6,000 and 10,000 strong, Premier Ed Schreyer gave a firm indication his government is prepared to follow closely the recommendations of the cabinet-appointed committee in drafting legislation.

In a speech interrupted several times by shouts from the crowd, Schreyer said in effect the only thing left to discuss is aid and retraining for those suffering dislocation in the private industry.

Oil Spill Cleaned

CALGARY (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. is spending thousands of dollars in cleaning up oil that spilled from its Ogden refinery here last March, refinery manager Ben Sherwood said Wednesday.

Clean-up operations have taken longer than anticipated, with about 75 per cent of the work completed, he said in an interview.

Imperial was spending an additional $50,000 on an interception ditch to corral any future leaks.

Boys' Camp Stripped

EDMONTON (CP) — A summer camp for underprivileged boys operated on donations has been systematically stripped of electrical wiring and plumbing, a camp spokesman said Wednesday.

Jack Thorpe, camp maintenance director, said the damage will range from $4,100 to $5,100 to repair, precluding improvements scheduled this year.

"Even professional thieves should have some principles," he said. Vandalism each winter accounts for some damage, but he said this was a professional job.

The camp, 17 miles northeast of Edmonton, is operated by the Edmonton Federation of Community Leagues.

Crash Kills Two

HINTON, Alta. (CP) — Herbert L. Reynoles of Rimbey and Kaye Boomer, 49, of Bluffton were killed Wednesday when the car in which they were travelling collided with a truck.

The driver of the truck and a passenger were not injured in the accident near Hinton, 180 miles west of Edmonton.

Floodwaters Inch Upwards

CARMAN, Man. (CP) — Conditions were static this morning as the flood-beleaguered residents of this southern Manitoba town awoke to face another day of floodfighting.

Emergency Measures Organization officials said the water from the Boyne River had gone up a couple of inches since Wednesday morning. But indications now are that a peak has been reached.

Eyes have turned skyward and ears listen intently to the radio as the weather now becomes a crucial factor.

Election Suits Maillardville

MAILLARDVILLE (CP) — This French-Canadian enclave in the Vancouver suburb of Coquitlam breathed a strong sigh of relief today after Quebec's overwhelming vote Wednesday for a united Canada.

"If they'd gone for separatism, pit us poor French-Canadians here," said Jean Lambert, western regional commissioner for 1,000 French-speaking Boy Scouts.

"Reactions from English-speaking people probably would have been 'if you want to speak French, go back to Quebec'," he said.

Romeo Paquette, secretary-general of the Maillardville-based French-Canadian Federation, said the election kept alive hopes for expanding the federation coast to coast.

"These hopes would have died had Quebec chosen to step out of confederation," he said.

Paquette said most Maillardville residents were happy about the election.

"Generally speaking, people were afraid of a backlash on the part of English-Canadians against the French in general. People in Maillardville have had enough trouble in the past and all of us have gone far beyond the point where we could return to Quebec."

There are about 5,000 French-speaking residents in Maillardville.

Major differences between Pacific Press Ltd. and five newspaper unions have been resolved according to mediation commission members who have made suggestions to both parties involving remaining issues.

Representatives of the publisher and the unions adjourned negotiations Wednesday to consider the proposals of the commission.

The dispute has halted production of Vancouver's two daily newspapers, the Sun and Province, since Feb. 15.

Bloody Political Vendetta Between Extremists Feared

GUATEMALA CITY (Reuters) — A bloody political vendetta between extremists was feared today following the sixth political murder in Guatemala in a month and a left-wing assassination attempt on an aide to the president-elect.

Patrolman Rufino Bolivar Flores was shot to death by a machine-gun as he tried to stop a car carrying left-wing guerrillas who minutes before had opened fire at the car of army Capt. Justo Rodriguez Diaz outside a gas station.

The captain is an aide to militant rightist President-elect Carlos Arana Osorio, who will be inaugurated July 5. Rodriguez Diaz was taken to hospital with head wounds but was reported out of danger.

The body of Julio Cesar De La Roca, a respected leftist who headed a cultural institute in Quetzatenango, was found beside a road to Guatemala City Wednesday 150 miles from Quetzatenango. He had disappeared from his home Tuesday and had been shot twice in the head.

Observers believed De La Roca was the victim of a band of rightists who killed two other leftists Monday and Tuesday. The gang is believed to be an anti-Communist group called Mano—the hand.

The current rightist-leftist violence revives memories of bloody warfare between both political sides three years ago in which about 800 people died.

Observers believe the fresh violence is related to the forthcoming inauguration of Col. Arana. Two years ago he wiped out rural guerrilla gangs and has pledged to carry out a similar purge of urban guerrilla gangs.

The observers feel the leftists, fearing a tough crackdown by the new government have decided to attack first.

Burned Boys On Road To Recovery

Eleven-year-old Andrew Beck, son of Mrs. Barbara Beck, 9820 3rd Street, is still in fair condition in Resthaven Hospital recovering from burns received in a fire Monday afternoon in a backyard tree fort.

Eric Griffiths, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Griffiths, 2351 Malaview, also recovering from burns, is in a satisfactory condition.

A third boy, Norman Heyer, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Heyer, 10139 Resthaven, was treated for burns and released.

The accident occurred when gasoline in an orange juice can exploded after a match was lit.

Explosions Halt Regal Train

MEDLOW BATH, Australia (Reuters) — Three loud explosions from detonators, apparently planted by vandals brought a train carrying Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip to an emergency stop Wednesday.

Police and railway employees who raced to the scene near this Blue Mountains township west of Sudney said the train was undamaged and later allowed it to continue.

Police said three detonators, used as emergency stop signals, were placed on the track by vandals and set off by the diesel train's wheels.

EX-FREEDOM FIGHTER HITS MOVEMENT

'Guerrillas Highwaymen'

The Manchester Guardian

SAN JOSE — "I was a guerrilla," said "Pepe" Figueres, who becomes president of the small Central American republic of Costa Rica for the third time May 8.

"But I have no sympathy nor use for the present-day guerrillas. I will join any international movement against them."

Figueres is a survivor of the 1947-58 guerrilla campaign centred in and around the Caribbean. The guerrillas, or freedom fighters as they were better know, were organized to overthrow the network of military dictators who dominated the Caribbean countries including the Dominican Republic, Cuba, Venezuela, Honduras, and Nicaragua at that time.

"And we were successful," said Figueres. "But many of our men were killed." Only in Nicaragua were they unsuccessful. "But the movement was weakened when Castro went over to the Communists. He was one of our boys. We helped him overthrow Batista. He is a defector from our fight. And he imprisoned a lot of our men, most of whom still remain in gaol."

Figueres said: "I am angry at this moment. A lot of people are now passing for idealists who are nothing more than highwaymen. Only in the cases of Brazil and Argentina do I have any reservations. The Cuban revolution has given them a pretext. No country should give them political asylum.

"If they really care, there is plenty of work for them to do. Just look at the slums in Latin America. They can come and help us here in Costa Rica," he added.

Costa Rica, however, is in less need of help than most Latin countries. Since 1947, this small republic, adjoined on the west by Nicaragua and on the east by Panama, has undergone a transformation.

Figueres in his first presidential term abolished the army. Costa Rica remains the only Latin country without an army. The military garrison was turned by Figueres into a fine arts museum. The social security system that he introduced remains far in advance of its other Latin counterparts.

In his second term of office, from 1954 to 1958, "Pepe" introduced legislation which brought United Fruit to heel in the eyes of his countrymen. From then on 45 per cent of its profits has been turned over to the state.

His third term of office promises to be as dynamic as the previous two. Since he was elected on Feb. 1 to take over from President Trejos, Figueres has been working on two plans. He hopes the first will eliminate poverty in Costa Rica.

A private founation incorporating the work of existing charitable organisations is to be set up. The first vice-president of the government will head the new body which will help the 100,000 families — a third of the population — who are thought stlll to live under the poverty line.

The intensive development plan which is to be the other major theme of his government is designed to attract more investment, both domestic and foreign, in Costa Rica.

The Costa Rican economy, which is one of the strongest in Latin America, is based on the two agricultural products of bananas and coffee. Figueres wants to provide more jobs and to extend the social welfare system.

Battle of 'Bean Balls' Causes Riot in Boston

SPORTS

Editor: Doug Peden

Bill WALKER

Norm Patenaude may have left his best race behind him on the hills of the Massachusetts countryside, but he's still pleased that he finished 64th. Which is creditable, indeed, considering that there were 1,174 entries. Nearly all showed up for the start. But not nearly all finished.

This was the Boston Marathon over the Olympic distance of 26 miles, 385 yards, an event of major international stature with almost everything, including beef stew.

To Bostonians, Patenaude was No. 485. After 999 entries get tagged with an "X" or an "A." High numbers go to overweights and fun lovers. The 18" by 24" program lists all the starters.

To Victorians, Patenaude is a member of the Flying Y Track Club. He coaches there twice a week and runs all over everywhere the rest of the time.

To the Canadian Press he is a nobody. The national news body didn't even bother to list his entry or his result, which they did in Boston.

"That didn't bother me too much," he said. "But it would have been nice to have had it recorded."

Norm, 25, admits he's a nut on running, and has been for 10 years, first at Belmont High, then with the Spartans under coach Ollie Sarakammas.

●

Now marathoning is his game. He does up to 20 miles every day, runs on grass during the week, and on the roads at the weekend.

"I just had to try the Boston Marathon," he said. "It's the biggest and the best. And I figured a good time there would help me get to the Canadians later this year.

"But I may have just missed. I was hoping for a 2:30. I was told that under 2:35, there might be a chance. But I finished in 2:37.08."

The winner Ron Hill of England, won the event in record time of 2:10.30.

Norm's best ever previously was 2:41.37 at Las Vegas in February. "I finished 11th," he said.

"So maybe I'm getting better," he added confidently.

But about the marathon, a gruelling grind that takes in what has been called the American scene, does it really tear at your guts?

"It was pretty rough," Norm added, "because of the cold. The temperature was about 40 degrees and there was a driving rain and hail that really stung.

NORM PATENAUDE
. . . training continues

"My arms were frozen, and I couldn't even move my fingers at the finish," he said.

"Oh yeah, we had some other problems," he laughed.

"They started the race out in the country. There was one gymnasium, and only about eight toilets. That created a bit of a jam," he said.

"And if that wasn't enough, there were 10 women entered in the race. They were there. Then some women reporters came into the dressing area. The police had to ask them to leave."

●

As for the race, Norm had it figured that if he could stay with the group that would finish about 17th to 25th, then he woud have achieved his goal, for this year. Trying to match the world's best could come later.

"I was doing all right," he said. "But the hills got me. I went through the hills too fast. And I guess I lost about 20 places because of it. No cramps, but the pain in my legs and groin was intense.

"But I did pass Ron Davis," he added. "He was fourth in 1969. He just froze up. It was that cold. And Bruce Kidd, he didn't finish," Norm said.

"No, I didn't have any blisters," he replied. "The new Japanese nylon shoes are very comfortable and nearly all the marathoners use them now.

"About 800 finished, officially," Norm added. "They stop counting after four hours."

"And they always lose some at Wellesley, he grinned. "There's a girls' school there.

"The losers' bus picks up the stragglers; you dont need cab fare," he admitted. Then he added: "In Las Vegas it was an ambulance, and that didn't go over too well.

"The crowds were great," he went on. "They lined most of the route and cheered everyone on. And it was a big feed, and a good time after the race. Yes, even the beef stew! Everybody gets to the Prudential Centre sooner or later, although some are in pretty bad shape," he admitted.

"But that comes from not being in condition."

Will he be going back?

"Sure," said Norm. "Because I am slightly disappointed at not doing better.

"It might have been the water, I'm not sure. But I did have a problem that may have stopped me from having a better time.

"I was about five miles out when I got a sudden attack of diarrhoea. And there was just nothing I could do about it — but keep on running. And I did."

Or as they say in Boston.

That's marathoning for you. It's got almost everything.

Kings Reach Final Round

CALGARY (CP) — Edmonton Oil Kings defeated Calgary Centennials, 1-0, on Wednesday night and earned the right to meet Flin Flon Bombers in the Western Canada Hockey League playoff final.

Victory gave the Oil Kings 10 points in the best-of-nine series. They had won three and tied two of eight previous games.

Rookie centre Randy Wyrozub scored the goal early in the second period and standout goalkeeping by Ian Wilkie made it enough to disappoint the 6149 fans.

First game of the best-of-seven final is scheduled Saturday.

Bosox, Athletics Erupt; Orioles Hammer Chisox

By The Associated Press

It was just about a tossup where the most hitting was taking place—in Chicago where Baltimore Orioles were using bats or in Boston where the Red Sox and Oakland Athletics were using beanballs.

The Orioles contented themselves with legitimate hitting, using five home runs—three by Paul Blair—to bury Chicago White Sox 18-2.

The Red Sox and Athletics aimed at each other instead of the ball, with Boston pitcher Sonny Siebert and Oakland slugger Reggie Jackson the main participants in an old fashioned bean-ball war. When they got back to baseball, the Sox beat the Athletics 5-3.

Elsewhere in the American League Wednesday, Detroit Tigers trimmed Kansas City Royals 8-2, Minnesota Twins blanked Cleveland Indians 1-0, Washington Senators shutout Milwaukee Brewers 4-0 and California Angels topped New York Yankees 3-2.

Blair, Ellie Hendricks and Boog Powell all walloped three-run homers for the Orioles, who sprayed 20 hits around Comiskey Park.

TOSSED OUT

Siebert struck out nine batters in the first five innings but got himself thrown out of the Boston-Oakland game in the beanball melee.

It started when Oakland's Chuck Dobson hit Siebert with a pitch in the Red Sox's fifth. When Siebert headed menacingly towards the mound, both benches emptied, but the umpires kept the peace. They couldn't quite do that an inning later when Siebert's first pitch plunked Jackson.

Jackson was restrained by Umpire Bill Haller but the Oakland bench charged the mound and decked Siebert. Players poured on the field from both dugouts and bullpens and just when order seemed restored, Jackson charged through a crowd of players at Siebert and both went down in another brawl.

Siebert, Jackson, Oakland pitcher John Odom and Boston coach George Thomas all were thrown out of the game.

Veteran Willie Horton and rookie Elliott Maddox ripped home runs easing Detroit past Kansas City as the Royals suffered their seventh consecutive loss. Mike Kilkenny, who had worked only 1 2-3 innings all season before Wednesday, got credit for the victory with ninth inning help from Fred Lasher.

Stan Williams bailed Jim Kaat out of a ninth inning jam and Minnesota shaded Cleveland on an unearned run.

Williams came in with runners on first and second and two out in the ninth and picked Tony Horton off second base to end the game.

Aurelio Rodriguez and Frank Howard hit homers and Dick Bosman scattered seven hits as Washington trimmed Milwaukee.

Ken McMullen, who came to the Angels from Washington, drove in the deciding run with an eighth inning single as the Angels won in New York for the first time since Aug. 27, 1968.

CARTY EXTENDS STREAK

Rico Carty, whose ninth inning double got Atlanta a tie before the Braves exploded four more times in a 10-6 victory over St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday night. also extended his hitting streak to 19 games.

"I'm not a streak hitter," the 29-year-old Braves' left fielder said. "I don't know what kind of hitter I am."

Cards reliever Chuck Taylor found out in the ninth when Carty drilled a double to right, tying the game at 6-6 before Richie Allen's error on Felix Millan's bouncer sent across the lead run.

Before the inning was over, Nelson Briles had wild pitched another run across and winning reliever Bob Priddy drove in the last pair with a single.

CUBS WIN

In other National League contests, Chicago Cubs belted Pittsburgh Pirates 10-5, Cincinnati Reds downed Houston Astros 5-3, Lost Angeles Dodgers stopped Philadelphia 6-1, Sand Diego Padres thumped Montreal Expos 10-0 and San Francisco Giants edged New York Mets 8-6.

Billy Williams, playing in his 999th consecutive game, slammed a homer and single as the Cubs battered the Pirates, who had stopped their 11-game winning string Tuesday.

Rams' Dick Bass Plans to Retire

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dick Bass, a fullback who set Los Angeles Rams rushing records, has announced he is retiring from professional football.

The 190-pounder from Vallejo, Calif., passed Dan Towler's Ram all-time rushing record and holds the record with 5,417 yards in 10 seasons.

He also caught 204 passes for 1,814 additional yards.

Shuttle Team Named

CALGARY (CP) — Badminton coach Chanarong Ratanna Saengsuang Wednesday named six players, including himself, to the Canadian entry in the Thomas Cup.

The competition, for the world badminton championship, begins May 28 in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, with five nations participating.

The five other members of the Canadian team are national singles champion Bruce Rollick of Vancouver, two-time winner Jamie Paulson of Calgary, Wayne Macdonnell of Vancouver, Yves Pare of Montreal and Dave Charon of Toronto.

The five members of the Thomas Cup entry other than Chanarong will also make up the men's section of the Canadian entry into the Commonwealth Games. The women's section will include Allison Daysmith and Judy Rollick formerly of Victoria and now of Vancouver, Nancy McKinley and Marg Shedd of Toronto and Montreal's Pat Moody.

Canada advanced to the Thomas Cup matches by defeating the United States, 6-3, in the American zone finals last month.

Cowan Plays Campbell In Quarter-Final Test

PINEHURST, N.C. (CP-AP) — Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., 1966 United States amateur champion, won two matches Wednesday to move into the quarter-finals of the North and South Amateur golf tournament.

Cowan was five under par over the par-72, 7051-yard Pinehurst Country Club course in his 4-and-2 victory over Jerry Courville of South Norwalk, Conn., in the fourth round.

In the third round, the Canadian defeated Jack Van Ess of Grand Rapids, Mich., 4 and 3.

Cowan went against Bill Campbell of Huntington, W.Va., in the quarter-finals today.

Campbell, Dale Morey, Bill Hyndman, Lanny Wadkins, Mike Kallan, Peter Green and John Birmingham advanced to the quarter-finals with two victories each in Wednesday's rounds.

Hyndman and Wadkins were the only U.S. Walker Cup team members from last year left from a starting group of eight. Four went down to defeat in Wednesday's rounds.

Penguins Know Blues Are Holding Hammer

PITTSBURGH (CP) — The stakes are still the same but the payoff now is in sight for St. Louis Blues when they meet Pittsburgh Penguins tonight in the sixth game of the Stanley Cup semi-final.

"They've got the hammer on us now and it's going to be a tough game," said Penguins left-winger Val Fonteyne as the team returned Wednesday from its 5-0 defeat in St. Louis.

The Blues' victory Tuesday night, behind the shutout goaltending of Jacques Plante, put them in a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series which decides the National Hockey League finalist to meet Boston Bruins for the cup.

"It's just like when we had the edge on Oakland," said Fonteyne. "We went in there knowing we had them where we wanted them. And that's the way the Blues are going to be."

The Penguins eliminated Oakland Seals in the quarter-finals with two victories here and the next two in Oakland.

LOST FIRST TWO

But Pittsburgh started this series at a disadvantage, losing the first two in St. Louis, winning the next two at home and losing the fifth on Blues' ice.

And to add to the Penguins' discomfort, their two wins here were only by one-goal margins, while the Blues won their home encounters by two, three and five goals.

"We'll just have to get out there and get the jump on them," said Fonteyne, a veteran of five playoffs with Detroit Red Wings before joining Pittsburgh.

The Penguins will at least arrive at the arena a little more refreshed than they were Tuesday when the temperature in St. Louis hit a high of 92 degrees.

COOLER IN ARENA

In an attempt to change the team's luck, Kelly took them to a different hotel from the one they usually use in St. Louis but after they checked into their new accommodation they found the air conditioning had broken down.

The forecast today was for a temperature in the low 80s which should leave the arena slightly cooler than the steamy atmosphere which players and fans suffered through at St. Louis.

If the Penguins win tonight, the seventh and deciding game will be played back in St. Louis Sunday afternoon. But should the Blues eliminate Pittsburgh tonight, they would start their best-of-seven final series with Boston, the East Division survivor, at St. Louis Sunday.

Tonight's game is scheduled for 5 p.m. PDT and will be televised across Canada by the CBC.

Stamps Sign Oregon Back

CALGARY (CP) — Halfback Don Summers and offensive lineman David Sterritt have been signed by Calgary Stampeders, the Western Football Conference team announced Tuesday.

Summers, an import, five-foot-nine and 190 pounds, played with Oregon State University in 1968. Last season he tried out with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, but was cut.

Sterritt, six feet and 245 pounds, was co-captain at the University of Waterloo last year and was fourth round draft choice of the Stampeders in the college draft.

Canucks Stretch Lead Over Bucks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks fired three goals in the second period and held on Wednesday night to edge Portland Buckaroos 5-3 and take a 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven Western Hockey League final series.

Ted Taylor led the Canuck attack with two goals and an assist before 12,073 fans while Paul Andrea, Len Lunde and Gerry Goyer each added singles.

Andy Hebenton, Jim Hay and Cliff Schmautz replied for Buckaroos.

Fifth game will be here Saturday.

Following a 1-1 first-period deadlock, Portland jumped to a 2-1 lead when Schmautz slid a shot to the corner while Vancouver's Marc Reaume was serving a hooking penalty.

Andrea evened the score at 2-2 less than four minutes later banging an Andy Bathgate pass past Portland netminder Jim McLeod.

BATHGATE MVP

Bathgate earlier was voted most valuable player to his team in the WHL in voting by players and winner of the Leader Cup.

Lunde gave Vancouver the lead at 11:49 but Hay tied it at 3-3 at 13:29 when his weak screen shot from the point slid under Vancouver goal tender George Gardner.

Taylor scored the winning goal at the 15:31 mark when he slapped in a shot from McLeod's left side as the netminder was scampering to recover after blocking Murray Hall's shot from close range.

It was the third time Taylor scored the winner.

Goyer added the insurance marker late in the third period when Buckaroos pulled McLeod for a sixth attacker.

ROUGH GAME

McLeod kicked out a total of 35 shots while Gardner stopped 25 in a rough contest.

Referee Dave Newell called 28 penalties, 18 of them in a wild first period.

A brawl erupted at the 18:58 mark of the opening period when Portland's Ray McKay and Vancouver's Ted McCaskill speared each other and then dropped sticks and went at one another. Both benches emptied.

Portland defenceman Connie Madigan and Vancouver's Cleland (Keke) Mortson were the other major combatants, each drawing a major and misconduct and suffering cuts to the face.

Shores Lose To Columbus In Cup Chase

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Columbus kept alive its hopes of a clean sweep of British Columbia soccer honors Wednesday night by defeating North Shore, 2-1, in the quarter-finals of the Province Cup competition for the provincial soccer championship.

Columbus has already won the Pacific Coast League championship and the Inter-League championship and is in the finals of the PCSL playoffs. The team has not lost a game this season.

A goal by Vanni Lenarduzzi with two minutes left in the game gave Columbus its win Wednesday. Larry Louie had given North Shore a 1-0 lead early in the second half. Victor Kodelja tied it 14 minutes later to set the scene for Lenarduzzi's winner.

Kirkman Collects Comeback Victory

SEATTLE (AP) — Boone Kirkman of Renton, Wash., blasted an almost helpless Bill McMurray with exploding rights Tuesday night to score a bloody third-round, technical knockout in their heavyweight fight.

Kirkman, 212, trying at 25 to come back from a shoulder injury, pounded the Sacramento, Calif., fighter from the opening seconds with massive right hands to the head.

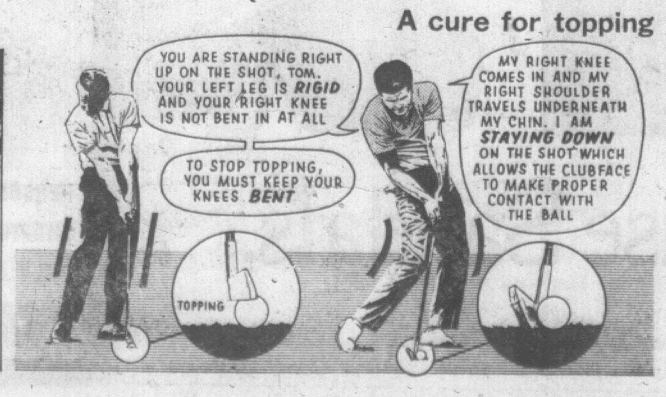
GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

A cure for topping



Carl's Swinging Rythm May Create Title Tune

By DOUG PEDEN

Going on 19, Carl Schwantje is big, strong and the only member of the Victoria Golf Club still chasing the big prize in the Times Vancouver Island Open tournament.

Since Carl is just one of 16 Open contestants who will be going to the post when the tourney continues Sunday at Royal Colwood, his chances of collecting the crown might appear somewhat slender. But the other people who swat golf balls through the gorse and grass of the Oak Bay links don't seem the least bit worried.

They like the odds of Schwantje against the field.

The reason for optimism, they'll tell you, is that "he's got rhythm."

Like some of the other young lions prowling Greater Victoria fairways, Carl crunches golf balls with enough power to frighten many rivals.

This actually isn't anything new. Last year he was hitting them almost as big, but he was also spending considerable time searching and swinging in bushes and tall grass. In other words, he tended to be a go-for-broke belter and accuracy wasn't his constant companion.

Since last summer, Schwantje has been working on control. He has slowed down the tempo of his swing in the early stages although the hands still thunder the clubhead through the hitting area in classic golf style.

The result this spring has been a controlled swing with excellent rhythm, that magic ingredient for cooking up fairway accuracy.

LONG AND STRAIGHT

Schwantje has been playing steadily to a scratch handicap. That means he has to score around par or better about every second time he tramps around a course, which is one big reason members of the Victoria course like his chances in the title chase.

"Carl has developed much better rhythm than he ever had before," says Oak Bay's assistant-pro, Vaughan Trapp. "At the present time he has as good a swing as any golfer on the Island. He hits the ball very long and very straight.

"He has a great potential and we think he can win this tournament."

When Schwantje steps to the first tee Sunday it will be a clash of contrasting styles. He is matched against Norm Boden, the defending champion and a two-time Island Open king, and that is enough to remind the blond belter that he might need more than rhythm to beat out a victory tune.

Unlike Carl, Norm doesn't scare anybody with raw power and he doesn't have a flair for the spectacular. This makes the Cowichan professional a deceptive opponent because he has the ability to manipulate the ball with authority and he does have the knack of winning.

Superb with trouble shots, Boden just gets the ball into the hole, without worrying about the method.

And, of course, that is what counts in golf. The scorecard doesn't have a place to explain "how." You just write down "how many."

INTERESTING MATCHES

The Boden-Shwantje clash is just one of several interesting matches on tap Sunday. For instance, playing in the same foursome will be Gorge Vale professional Earl Davies and long-hitting Gorge amateur Urban Allen.

Laurie Carroll, the other professional among the survivors and also a two-time winner goes against Cowichan's Martin Holman.

In all, there will be eight matches in both the Open and handicap sections. Starting times are listed in the draw printed on this page.

Only Sad Memories for Leeds After Chelsea's Overtime Win

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — Leeds United, described as "the greatest team in England not to win a trophy this season," was left with nothing but bitter memories today after being nosed out of the Football Association Cup by London's Chelsea crew.

In the first replay of a final for Britain's top soccer trophy since 1912, Chelsea came from behind here Wednesday night to edge Leeds 2-1 in a 30 minute overtime match. The teams had battled to a 2-2 draw at London's Wembley Stadium April 11 after a full hour of extra time.

Leeds' loss was the final frustration in a season of disappointments. At one time they seemed a cinch not only the FA Cup but the English League championship and the European Cup of Champions.

But they finished as league runners-up, and Glasgow Celtic upset them in the semi-final of the European tournament.

And there was double blow for Leeds' star centre-half Jack Charlton. He pulled a leg muscle in the game, making him uncertain as a starter for England's squad that leaves Monday for World Cup play in Mexico.

Charlton's injury may have cost Leeds the game. The winning goal 16 minutes before the end came on a long Chelsea throw-in near the Leeds goal. Charlton got his head to it but couldn't clear and David Webb headed it in as it bounced high in front of the goalmouth.

The Londoners had to come from behind three times—twice in the first game—before this clincher.

The Yorkshiremen were on top through most of the first half of regulation play and led 1-0 at its close. Mick Jones took a pass through from Allan Clarke, carried the ball between two defenders and fired it high into the net.

A few minutes before, Chelsea goalie Peter Bonetti had been felled in a mid-air collision with Jones and played the rest of the game with a knee heavily bandaged.

Chelsea got the equalizer with 15 minutes of regular time left as Peter Osgood ran in at high speed to take high centre from Charlie Cooke and head it low past young goalie David Harvey, replacing an injured regular.

OVERTIME THRILLER

Knicks Topple Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — New York Knickerbockers overcame a 55-foot last-second basket by Jerry West in regulation time and beat Los Angeles Lakers, 111-108, in overtime Wednesday night.

Knicks thus took a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association championship playoff. Fourth game will be here Friday night.

Former Laker Dick Barnett scored 11 points in the final quarter, then slamed home the final basket in the extra session that spelled defeat for Lakers before 17,500 fans.

New York appeared to have the game won in regulation time when Dave Debusschere sank a field goal with less than 10 seconds remaining.

West, who scored 34 in defeat, lofted a truly desperate throw from backcourt that dropped through the basket, as the buzzer went off for a 102-102 deadlock, sending the game into overtime..

Willis Reed, the game's high scorer with 38 points, was the man who finally sent Knickerbockers into a 109-108 lead when he sank a free throw after Elgin Baylor's sixth personal foul of the game. It came with less than one minute left.

Lakers missed their oportunity bringing the ball down court and Barnett popped in the key basket for his 18th point of the game and victory for the New Yorkers.

Marion's Record Tally May Be Rolloff Factor

Few things are certain in athletic competition, but all but one of the bowlers bidding for the women's fivepin crown in the seventh annual Times Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs might be working under a psychological shadow.

MARION HAIME
. . . top qualifier

Starting on Oct. 4 last year, pinspillers competing in regular league play on southern vancouver Island lanes were shooting for Bowler-of-the-Week awards. Weekly awards in the 26 weeks of the Times-sponsored contest went to bowlers registering the highest scores in each of four divisions — men's and women's fivepins and men's and women's tenpins.

Each award winner is eligible for the rolloffs, scheduled this year for Sunday, May 10.

There could be a psychological barrier in the fivepin section because one of the weekly winners — Marion Haime — rolled the highest series ever recorded in the history of the contest during the 20th week.

Marion rolled a blazing 1,016 three-game series at Town and Country Lanes to top the previous mark of 1,005 set by Dolly Bach in the 1965-66 season.

ONE CHAMP RETURNS

Another strong contender for the rolloff title could be Evie Weinberger, who rolled the second-highest score this season of 933 during the 14th week.

Or it might be victory time for Fran Woodruff, who topped her division in the 11th week with a 926 series.

Only one previous rolloff champion made it back to the qualifying list. Mary Ball, fivepin queen in the 1966-67 season, entered the list this season with an 889 series during the ninth week.

BONUS AWARD

But each of the 26 finalists is capable of setting the pace in the rolloffs, in which each winner will receive a Times Trophy.

Of the winner is also a daily subscriber to the Daily Times, he (or she) will collect a $100 bonus award.

Fivepinners this year will all chase cash and glory at Gibson's Bowladrome, starting at 1:30 p.m., while tenpinners will stage rolloff battles at Mayfair Lanes, beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Canuck Pros Are Upset Over Choice

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian golf professionals are voicing complaints over the choice of United States golf professional Tommy Aaron to shoot the target score for National Golf Week June 6-14.

The Royal Canadian Golf Association, which sponsors the event to raise money for junior programs, has decided that Aaron will create more interest across Canada.

A number of Canada's club professionals are upset because Aaron was picked over Bob Cox of Vancouver, defending Canadian professional champion.

Normally, the top male and female golfers in Canada play one round and club members across the country, using their handicaps, attempt to beat those gross scores with their net scores.

Any club member can play in the competition for a fee of $1.

LISTS WINS

One Canadian Professional Golfers Association member said:

"Cox beat both Al Balding and George Knudson, both of Toronto. Do you think if Knudson had won it, they'd have shoved him aside in favor of Aaron?

"He won the Saskatchewan, Alberta and Atlantic opens in addition to the tour championship last year."

Aaron won the Canadian Open last year and his fee of $2,000 is being split 50-50 between the Canadian Open committee and the RCGA.

Frank Beard Now Seventh On Cash List

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Beard moved into the weekly top 10 leaders of professional golf's 1970 money winners with his victory in the Tournament of Champions Sunday, the PGA Tournament Players Division announced Tuesday.

Beard's triumph in the Tournament of Champions earned him $30,000 and placed him seventh on the money list with $53,876.

For the fifth consecutive week, Lee Trevino leads with $87,164.

The 10 money leaders:

Trevino, $87,164; Gary Player, $73,116; Billy Casper, $69,483; Dick Lotz, $69,321; Miller Barber, $67,428; Bob Lunn, $61,126; Beard, $53,876; Tony Jacklin, $53,359; Bruce Devlin, $52,169, and Bert Yancey, $43,553.

Car-Racing Brothers Flaunt Flower Power

"Flower power" with a new angle could be in evidence Saturday night at the second late-model stock car and jalopy racing event of the season at Western Speedway.

Mike Currier, who drives one of the late-model stocks, has a garden of tulips with funny faces painted on the trunk of his car along with the caption "Tulip Twister."

Brother John, who pulled off a big win in the 100-lap Bill Foster Stock Car 100 last year later had a garden of tulips painted on the rear lid of his car with the words — "Tulip Stomper." Perhaps this was meant to express something!

Another late-model pilot expected to make a showing when time trials get under way at 7 p.m. is Neil Montgomery, who sat out most of last season but is a veteran of both stocks and modified competition.

COOPER MAY RACE

Veteran drivers Denny Swain and Dave Cooper are expected to race while Ross Surgenor and Rick O'Dell have switched back to stock engines for this meet.

Dave Cooper and crew plan to leave their big motor in place to fully prepare for the next National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing-sactioned meet on May 9. Surgenor and O'Dell will have to switch back again after Saturday's action.

In the jalopy section, Bob Collins will be looking for a second straight feature victory. Harvey St. Hilaire, who missed the first race, is expected to lead other strong challengers.

LABS DOWN LAKE HILL TO KEEP SOCCER SPOT

Labatts, with a record of two victories, won the right to remain in the second division of the Victoria and District Soccer League after downing third-division champion Lake Hill 2-1 Wednesday night at Royal Athletic Park.

Lake Hill, which will have to stay in the third division for another season, faces Cowichan Saints (Division II) in the final game of the round-robin promotion-relegation series Saturday at 2:15 p.m. in Hampton Park.

Labs downed Saints 10-1 in the first match of the series last Sunday.

Victory over Lake Hill came on penalty kicks after a scoreless deadlock was maintained through 30 minutes of overtime.

Brian Barraclough of Lake Hill and Hardy Rufleir of Labatts alternately took three shots for the decision. Rufleir scored on his last two attempts while Barraclough managed to find an opening on his final try.

York Breaks Riding Slump

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jockey Ray York broke a five-day slump at Exhibition Park Wednesday night when he rode three winners in an eight-race card before a crowd of 4807.

York, a 36-year-old Californian who has won many prestigious races in the U.S., took the first race aboard Laurick, the third with Gail's Beauty and the fifth with Ships Baby.

Rogelio Olguin won two races, including a $39.40 upset on Donavee in the fourth. Donavee combined with North Slope, another longshot, for a $666.30 exacto.

The featured seventh race went to Billings Bullet, who led all the way to defeat Makeadeal in the 6½-furlong dash.

MAY BE FIRST FEMALE JOCKEY IN KENTUCKY DERBY

Diane Hopes Mud Stays Away

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Diane Crump stood on the threshold today of becoming the first girl to ride in the Kentucky Derby, America's most glamorous horse race.

Standing between her and racing history were possible injury to her mount, another change of mind by the colt's owner and mud—the latter the most likely problem.

Early today trainer Don Divine said in an interview that W. L. Lyons Brown's Fathom would run in Saturday's derby and Miss Crump would ride him.

Earlier, Divine said that Fathom, who had finished seventh of 10 three-year-olds in Tuesday's Derby Trial, would not start in the 1¼-mile $125,000-added Derby. He said Brown had left the decision to him.

Of the change in plans, Divine said: "The owner wants to run and he pays the bills. So okay, we'll run." But he added: "If it comes up really muddy, I believe he'll let me take him out."

The Trial was run on an off-track. The weather forecast for Saturday said there was a 40-per-cent chance of showers.

Should Fathom run in the Derby he is expected to join at least 16 other three-year-olds.

The field was to be officially set today.

Listed as the top probables for the 96th running of the Derby are Raymond Curtis' My Dad George, Samuel Agnew's Terlago, Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Personality, Sonny Werblin's Silent Screen and Mr. and Mrs. Ted Gary's Corn Off The Cob.

Post time for the derby, in which each contestant will carry 126 pounds, is 2:40 p.m. PDT.

Miss Crump rode Fathom in 11 of his 12 races, including the one-mile Derby Trial. She was the first girl ever to compete in the Trial.

Miss Crump, 21, of Oldsmar, Fla. has ridden 33 winners in her 14 months as a professional jockey. She was the first girl to get a jockey's licence in the United States.

MICK'S CHAIN HUGE LOSER

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Mickey Mantle's, a restaurant chain which bears the name of the former New York Yankee baseball star, lost $1,279,777 in 1969. Reporting this Wednesday, Roy J. True, president of the Dallas-based firm, attributed the bulk of the loss to the process of changing the original country cooking concept to one of wider appeal. True said this would involve the disposal of a number of the chain's existing restaurants.

Kentucky Wins Final

NEW YORK — Kentucky downed New York 112-101 Wednesday to win the best-of-seven eastern division final of the American Basketball Association playoffs, 4-3.

This is what Mother's Day is all about.

Mother's Day starts with your mother. And you.

We at Panasonic get sentimental about things like that.

So this year, we'd like to help you do a few things for your mother to make Mother's Day more than just a token.

We'd like you to give her a Panasonic appliance.

Why? Because, while it's the thought that counts, we think that what you give her should also make her happy during all the other days that aren't Mother's Day.

Our toasters will toast her bread automatically (not to mention the one that's the world's first 4-slice, self-lowering toaster).

Our blenders will blend her recipes automatically (not to mention the one that's the world's first blender with push-button timing).

And our electric coffee-pots and ice-crushers will make life even easier for her.

So you see. We think there's more to Mother's Day than what the calendar and the greeting cards say.

Trinidad Adopts Emergency Powers

By ROBERT C. MAYNARD

PORT OF SPAIN (WP) — Despite the pleas of opposition members that democracy is rapidly fading from this Commonwealth country, Parliament handed the government of Trinidad and Tobago a package of emergency powers Wednesday that permit preventive detention and whipping of political prisoners.

Shaffeyei Shah, a member of the minority Democratic Labor Party, charged that the new measure is "vengeance against the erring few" and an excessive power to ruling People's National Party, which has been governing under an older set of emergency regulations for more than a week.

'DICTATORSHIP'

"We warn all freedom-loving people," said opposition whip Alloy Laquay, "that we are heading for dictatorship and military rule."

The emergency law permits the government to suspend the first articles of Trinidad's constitution.

Attorney General Karl Hudson-Phillips, who argued the government's case in Parliament, said the bill was a temporary measure, and the emergency powers would be recinded as soon as the government is certain that the black power uprising which caused a riot here last week was under control.

SCOLDS OPPOSITION

"You speak of flogging as barbaric," Hudson-Phillips scolded the opposition, "but you have had a flogging law on the books all these years, and I haven't heard anybody move to take it off."

The old flogging law permitted corporal punishment only in cases in which it was ordered by the Supreme Court. The new law permits it to be ordered by local magistrates appointed by the government.

Other features of the law provide for police arrest without warrants of persons suspected of subversion and for detention for periods up to six months without a charge being filed.

FIVE TURN UP

While parliament was preparing to debate the measure, the head of the 760-man army here was attempting to woo about 50 of his soldiers out of the hills and back to army headquarters at Teteron Bay, scene of a mutiny by the army recently.

Only five men turned up in the hour and a half that Lt. Col. Joffre Serrette waited. He spent the time pacing back and forth in a gasoline station with hundreds of poverty-stricken villagers surrounding him and trying to get close to him. They treated him as a hero.

"Don't take the soldiers away," one man pleaded with Serrette. "We need them here to protect us from the police."

Several youths from the area complained that police have been shaving the heads of young men they find wearing Afro haircuts.

"This is the same police force," one angry Trinidadian said, "that the government wants to make all-powerful. Now they can even flog us legally."

CHILDREN PICK MATE FOR DEAR OLD DAD

SITTINGBOURNE, England (UPI) — George Matthews' five children thought he was lonely since their mother died several years ago, so they invited pretty Yvonne Olson, 20, to a party on his 38th birthday.

The young matchmakers will be in church Saturday when their father marries Miss Olson, whom he had known only slightly before.

I think the children realized what she meant to me before I did myself," said Matthews, a Royal Navy physiotherapist.

'Fallen Sparrow' Wins Cash

SAN FRANCISCO (Reuters) — Gloria Sykes, described by her lawyer as a "fallen sparrow" turned into a nymphomaniac by a 1964 cable car accident, was awarded $50,000 Wednesday to compensate for her problems.

Miss Sykes, a 29-year-old blonde, had sought $500,000 from the municipal transport system that operates San Francisco's famous cable cars.

But a jury, after a month-long trial that brought to the witness stand six of the buxom plaintiff's 100 or so lovers and a bevy of psychiatrists, reached a compromise between her demands and the city's assessment.

In his closing argument, City Attorney William Taylor said it was not the accident but something within Miss Sykes' nature that fuelled her unremitting sex drive.

SUPPORT SWELLS FOR YALE HEAD

NEW HAVEN (WP) — The students, alumni and trustees of Yale University gave overwhelming support to president Kingman Brewster Wednesday in the face of a call for his dismissal by Vice-President Spiro Agnew.

In a speech in Hollywood, Fla., Tuesday night Agnew said that alumni of Yale — a "fine old college" — should demand that Brewster be fired for doubting that black revolutionaries could be assured a fair trial in present-day America.

Reaction to the speech illuminated the difference between the student crisis at Yale and comparable uprisings at Harvard, Columbia and Cornell universities.

In the earlier Ivy League upheavals, there were deep splits within the universities. Here, unless all appearances deceive, there is a high degree of unity as Yale faces the test of a May 1 demonstration on behalf of a Black Panthers implicated in a local murder trial.

This unity was reflected in reams of statements and petitions, with the principle dissenting note supplied by Gov. John M. Dempsey, a Democrat and ex-officio member of the Yale Corp., who said he was "shocked" by Brewster's statement and that it should be up to the president's conscience whether or not to resign.

★ ★ ★

In a speech in Philadelphia, Mayor John Lindsay of New York, a Yale alumnus and trustee, charged that the "intemperate language of the vice-president heightens the tensions at a university already on the edge of turmoil."

New Haven banker William Horowitz, another trustee, termed Agnew's remarks "unjustified, irresponsible and self-serving' and said that Brewster's comments on justice for blacks "highlighted the need for particular caution in selecting a jury" for the upcoming Black Panther trail.

A third trustee, Rt. Rev. Paul Moore Jr., presently suffragan Episcopal bishop of Washington, D.C., found it "totally outrageous" that Agnew would suggest the firing of the head of a private university. He went on: "I am extremely pleased with the way Brewster has handled the present crisis."

ALL OVER, an unidentified Union Nationale organizer slumps in a chair in a deserted headquarters in Montreal after the announcement that Jean-Jacques Bertrand's government has been defeated. (CP Wirephoto.)

Creditiste Performance A Repeat of Federal Move

QUEBEC (CP) — The Creditistes slapped together a provincial political party in January, elected a leader in March and won 13 legislature seats in April.

But they don't exactly pop up from nowhere.

Their performance in Wednesday's Quebec general election was ineffective a rerun of the Creditiste success story in federal politics.

Involved are the same rural regions, the same angry people and the same skilful political organizers. They won in ridings around Quebec City, in the eastern townships and in northwestern Quebec, their strong spot federally.

Their entry into provincial politics cost Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand's Union Nationale party 10 seats directly and several more indirectly.

They took three seats from the Liberals, but elsewhere helped elect Liberals by cutting into the Union Nationale's vote.

STARTED IN '68

Their decision to come into provincial politics after several years of hesitation dates to the 1968 federal election, when the late Premier Daniel Johnson backed Robert Stanfield's Tories in several Quebec ridings in an effort to stop Pierre Trudeau's Liberals.

The Union Nationale-backed Tory campaigns in several ridings spoiled the Creditistes' chances of victory.

Real Caouette's federal Creditistes, who elected 14 members to Parliament anyway, vowed not to forget the Union Nationale's role.

The Creditistes founded their party at a convention last Jan. 25, but they didn't have a leader when Premier Bertrand called the election March 12.

SAMSON WON

So they organized what a Creditiste PR man described as "a miracle convention."

Elected leader was Camil Samson, a 35-year-old car salesman from Rouyn. He was elected to the legislature in Rouyn-Noranda Wednesday.

The Creditiste campaign was simple: They concentrated on regions where the federal Creditistes won 26 Commons seats in 1962, 20 in 1963 and nine in 1965. Mr. Caouette and the other federal MPs came in to help.

The performance of the Creditistes spells trouble for the Union Nationale, which once had the conservative elements in rural regions all to itself. Their campaign bared indignation of rural Quebecers with high taxes and low prices for farm produce.

Finance Talks Set for June

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal officials expect no change, as a result of Wednesday's Quebec election, in Finance Minister Edgar Benson's plans to meet provincial finance ministers early in June in Winnipeg.

Senior Quebec public servants also are expected to attend a meeting of provincial officials here next week to prepare for the Winnipeg meeting.

Finance department officials were cautious today about interpreting the Quebec election victory of Liberal Leader Robert Bourassa and its effect on federal-provincial financial relations.

Work is understood to be well advanced in Quebec City in preparing the province's comprehensive brief on federal proposals to revise the Income Tax Act. Mr. Benson's white paper on the subject is to be a focal point of the Winnipeg meeting.

Officials here are uncertain whether the Quebec brief will be extensively revised by the new Liberal government when it succeeds Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand's administration. But they believe the province's officials will take the same technical approach to the white paper as they have in the past.

The first impression of the Quebec result here is that the Bertrand government's repeated demands for $200,000,000 from Ottawa, representing federal collections of the two-percent social development tax since its imposition last year, now is dead. Mr. Bourassa did not make much of the issue in his electoral campaign.

MAY DELAY START

The Liberal leader said Quebec would join in the national medical care insurance program initiated by Ottawa, but that under his administration the province might not start it on July 1 as Mr. Bertrand had announced.

Mr. Bourassa has said his new government will tackle the medical care insurance question as one of the first items on its agenda when it takes office. Ottawa officials say they can only await developments in Quebec City.

The Winnipeg meeting is scheduled for June 5 and 6. All provinces are expected to file their briefs on the tax change white paper by that time, but Ottawa may not be ready to reply conclusively to the provincial stands then.

Mr. Benson has said he will not make firm decisions on the tax proposals until all major representations are in—including reports from the Commons and Senate committees now studying the white paper. They won't finish their work by June 1, and the Commons committee at least may hold meetings through most of the early summer.

The Winnipeg meeting is the second of what is planned as a new series of quarterly conferences of federal and provincial finance ministers. Such a plan was agreed to here in December, and the first meeting was held in Quebec City in February.

The February meeting coincided with the Quebec winter carnival, and—by stragely similar circumstances—the Winnipeg meeting will be held while Manitoba centennial celebrations are underway.

N-Blast Results Still Awaited

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons Wednesday his department is still waiting for information on the first U.S. nuclear underground test on Amchitka Island in the Aleutians.

He had said earlier that this information would be valuated before any Canadian protest would be made on further tests. He was replying to Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey).

'It's Only a Beginning' Chant Young Separatists

MONTREAL (CP)—"It's only a beginning—continue the struggle."

This student activist slogan resounded through the east-end Paul Sauve Arena Wednesday night as about 1,000 supporters of the separatist Parti Quebecois cheered the seven members the party elected in the Quebec general election.

It arose from the apparently optimistic mood of the party's young supporters regarding the future of the Parti Quebecois and the cause of Quebec's political independence.

It also may have quieted party officials' private fears that disappointing results in the election would cause the young to resort to more radical action in support of their ideals.

In speeches to the crowd, most of whom appeared to be students or young workers, vanquished party leader Rene Levesque and the elected candidates said the Parti Quebecois had done well in its first election and would continue its work.

Mr. Levesque said the party has made "a first spectacular break-through in the national assembly."

He said the party had fought "the power of money and the power of the status quo" and had succeeded in drawing wide support.

He noted that the party received the second-largest share of total votes and referred to the Parti Quebecois as "the official Opposition party in the eyes of public opinion."

The elected candidates who followed him to the podium also emphasized the party's future, ignoring for the most part Mr. Levesque's defeat in Montreal Laurier and the party's relatively small representation in the assembly.

About 150 persons gathered in the area earlier in the evening to watch CBC French-language television network coverage of the election on a huge screen.

The youthful, smartly-dressed followers cheered and clapped when it was reported shortly after 9 p.m. that Mr. Levesque had been elected.

POSITION REVERSED

However, when it was reported shortly after 10 p.m. that Mr. Levesque had in fact been defeated, there were shouts of anger and a few chairs were slammed against the concrete floor of the arena.

The announcement left the audience subdued.

When Mr. Levesque finally entered, appearing tired, he was greeted with a deafening standing ovation.

His brief speech was interrupted several times by applause and, as he emphasized the theme of the party's future, some of the pretty young girls who had been crying a few minutes earlier began to smile and cheer.

Before the election, Mr. Levesque had predicted the party would elect from 15 to 25 members and would receive as much as a third of the total vote.

With 68 per cent of the results reported, the party had elected seven members and had received 24 per cent of the vote.

CABINET ministers defeated in Wednesday's voting include Finance Minister Mario Beaulieu, top, and Revenue Minister Raymond Johnston.

Firm Fined

OTTAWA (CP) — Grissol Foods Ltd. of Montreal was fined a total of $1,000 in provincial court Wednesday after pleading guilty to three charges of misleading advertising — a television commercial and two store advertisements claiming Loney's soup mix was on sale at a special price of 10 cents a package. A federal combines investigator said he learned the regular price of the product has been 10 cents for years.

Composer Released

NEW YORK (AP) — Composer Igor Stravinsky has left hospital where he spent more than three weeks with lung and kidney infections. The 87-year-old musician returned to his apartment Wednesday. A spokesman said Stravinsky still is "very weak."

Even Bourassa Surprised By Stunning Vote Victory

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert Bourassa was as surprised as anyone else Wednesday night in the news that his provincial Liberal party had won a stunning victory in the Quebec general election.

The 36-year-old lawyer-economist, who took the Liberal helm about three months ago, admitted that the outcome—at least 71 Liberal members elected—was more than he had hoped for.

Speaking on television before cheering supporters at his packed campaign headquarters, Mr. Bourassa said:

"It is obvious that the challenge of the Liberal party in the next few years is to show that Quebec can remain in Canada.

"And we will face that challenge taking into account that Quebec is not a province like the others. And we are confident that we will succeed."

He added:

"As you know, we gambled on the political maturity of Quebecers, on their good sense."

Less than four years ago, he first walked into the national assembly as freshman member for Montreal Mercier. As the party's financial critic, he got a reputation as a "nice, shy guy."

But his image changed radically in the last few months.

Just last September, after Jean Lesage announced his retirement as Quebec Liberal leader, a survey conducted by a Montreal newspaper indicated so little interest in Mr. Bourassa as a potential leadership candidate that it could not even be expressed in percentage points.

But by the time the leadership convention was held in mid-January, the frail-looking lawyer had developed into a politician popular enough to win a decisive first-ballot victory over two seasoned veterans.

He was never a sensational speaker, but his platform style showed sharp improvement during the three-week election campaign.

During the leadership campaign and in the election that followed, Mr. Bourassa concentrated on bread-and-butter issues.

He made the promise of new jobs his political trademark in a province with chronic unemployment, and his judgment was borne out by newspaper opinion polls indicating that this problem was uppermost in the minds of the voters.

He took a firm stand on the side of federalism, opposing Rene Levesque's separatist Parti Quebecois, but made it clear that he intends to put the squeeze on the Ottawa government for "a better share of Canadian prosperity."

He told cheering party workers in his Montreal campaign headquarters Wednesday night that the promised attack on the province's economic problems will begin immediately.

A first priority would be the appointment of a cabinet committee to look into Quebec's financial situation.

"As a matter of urgency, we want to reduce unemployment substantially, increase capital investment and control government fiscal commitments.

"With the co-operation of the federal government, and the provinces of the west, we want to give Quebecers a better share of Canadian prosperity."

Airmen Protest

CHICOPEE, Mass. (AP) — Two airmen at Westover Air Force Base said Wednesday they have named the Vietnam Moratorium Committee as beneficiary of their $10,000 government life insurance policies. Airmen George Manniello and James McIntosh, both 20, said their action is a form of war protest.

TRINITRON® COLOR the only difference that really matters.

When it comes to color, there's a lot of talk these days about better TV pictures—better because they're brighter.

We'd like to point out that brightness is only half the picture. Sharpness is every bit as important.

That's why we developed Trinitron—to make the image brighter and sharper. We did it by shooting all our color beams through the centre of one big electron lens—not one color through each of three small lenses like the others do. Our color beams don't diffuse; they focus sharply. The resulting image is sharper—and brighter—than any other color TV. At any price. In any size.

What's more, Trinitron circuitry is all solid state, which should eliminate 70 percent of service calls.

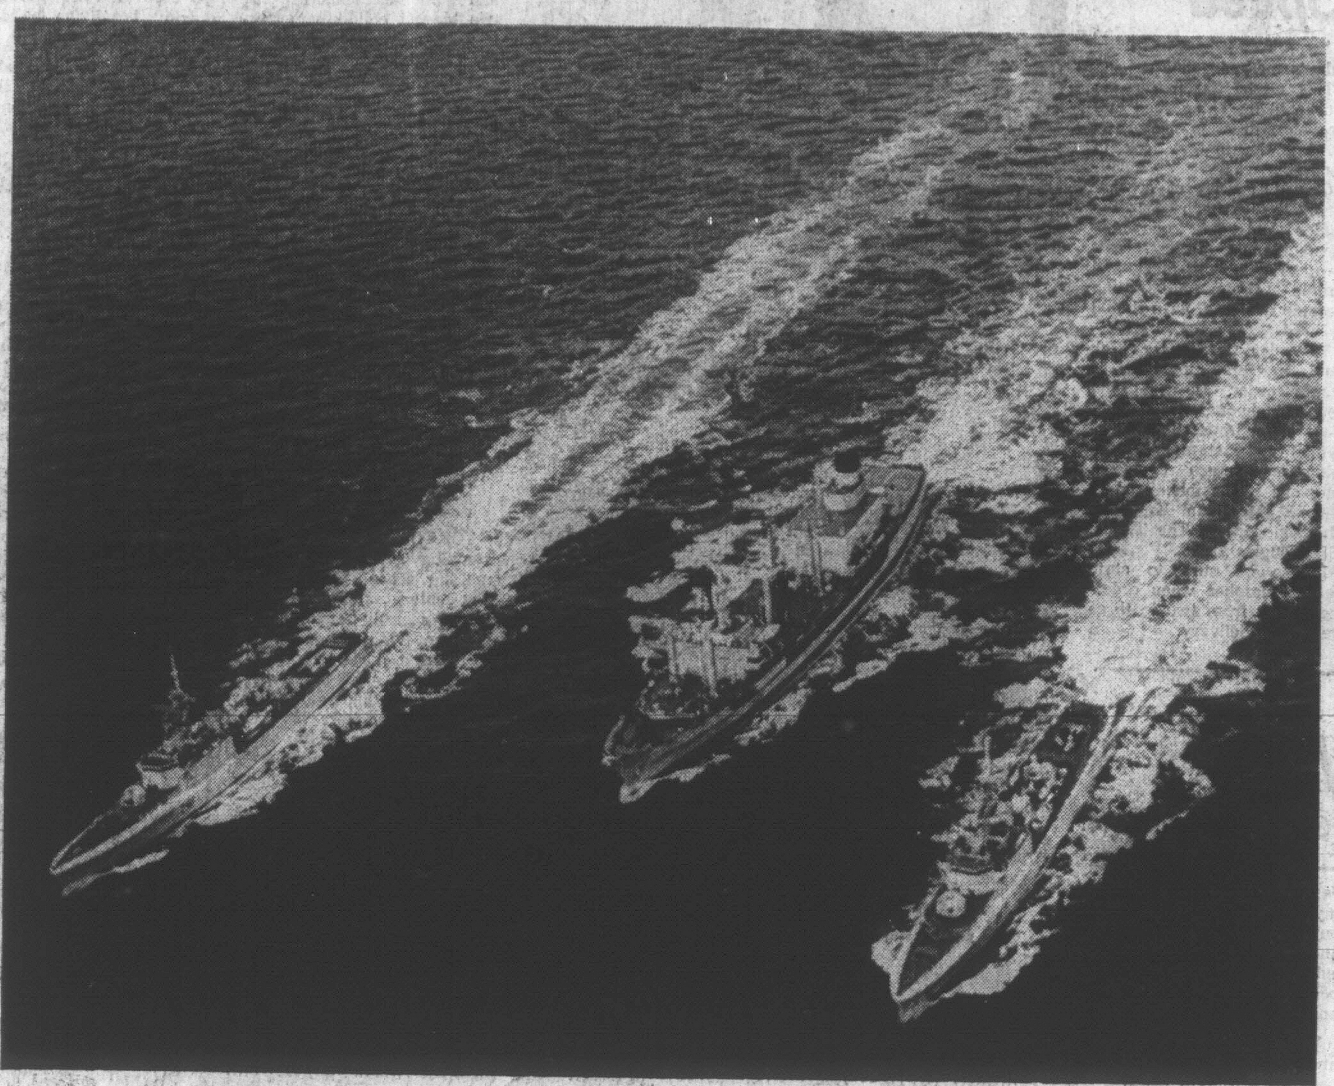
Join The Navy And See Expo 70



Off to Japan Monday are the Esquimalt-based destroyer-escorts HMCS Yukon and HMCS McKenzie, and the fleet replenishment ship HMCS Provider (centre). The three ships, with a total complement of 650 personnel aboard, will take part in Canada Week celebrations at Expo 70 while visiting Kobe and Osaka May 22 to June 1. They will also visit the Japanese ports of Hakodate, Yokosuka and Sasebo. Under the command of Capt. Robert Peers, the three ships will call at Pearl Harbor en route back to Victoria in July.

Hospitals Move Ahead Snail-Like

By DON VIPOND

They called it a "progress report" at the regional hospital board meeting Wednesday but it revealed more hang-ups than progress.

Directors received the first of what is to be a series of monthly progress reports on every hospital project in the region.

It shows that a project generally takes about two years from the time it is "initiated" to creep along the tortuous road of studies, plans and approvals to the point where building is ready to begin.

Construction then takes months, perhaps as long as a year.

EXAMPLE AT GORGE

Just how long progress takes for local hospital improvement is best illustrated by the case of Gorge Road Hospital.

The concept of adding 150 beds there for chronically ill patients had been approved by the provincial government and all local bodies when a referendum for spending approval went to a vote in October of 1968.

The word Wednesday, 18 months later, is that working drawings and specifications, which were to have been ready today, will be finished in about three weeks.

Each project begins with the board of directors of the hospital concerned. It then goes to the region's hospital board for approval but the biggest hurdle is getting the green light from the provincial government's Hospital Insurance Service.

The BCHIS must approve the concept, sketch plans, working drawings, going to tender, letting the contract. All told there are 10 points along the way requiring BCHIS approval before one brick can be put on top of another.

Weeks, sometimes months, can slip by between these approvals.

OIL SLICK RESEARCH SEEKS FUNDS

A tag day to raise funds to determine the cause and the extent of damage caused by an oil slick off the coast of Alaska will be held by the Voice of Women.

Tags will be sold between 7 and 9 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Mavis De Girolamo, an official of the organization, said funds will be used to outfit the proposed Green Peace vessel which will investigate the area.

The ship will be manned by scientists and scientific equipment.

Contracts Awarded On Outfall

The first contracts were let Wednesday for a major sewerage project in Greater Victoria.

The contracts are for supply and delivery of steel pipe and pumps for the Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt.

Tenders were called earlier this week for construction of the outfall.

And directors of the Capital Regional District board gave final reading to a $7.5 million bylaw for the outfall and main trunk line leading to it. The debt will be shared by Esquimalt, Victoria and Saanich.

OVER MILE LONG

The new outfall will be 6,100 feet long, or more than a mile, and will replace the existing 57-year-old outfall which discharges sewage just off the shore.

Seven companies submitted nine different bids for supply and delivery of steel pipe and fittings. Directors awarded the contract to Rodman Supply Co. at $169,380, subject to review of financial and management information available on the company.

Rodman is a subsidiary of White Shield Corp., based in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and primarily a supply company servicing the oil industry.

Three companies submitted bids for sewage pumping equipment and board directors awarded the contract to Worthington (Canada) Ltd. for $27,109.

AMONG THE DELAYS, SOME ADVANCES

Site Set for Jubilee's Addition

Hospital expansion and improvements in the Capital region are planned or in progress from Colwood to the Gulf Islands.

Here is a summary of the "progress report" released Wednesday:

● At Royal Jubilee Hospital — 150 beds for patients requiring extended care will be built on the southeast corner of the grounds, between Lee and Fort Streets.

Architects are preparing design and construction cost estimates.

A master plan for the hospital's development from 550 to 660 acute care beds along with extensive outpatient and day care services is nearly finished and should be available about the end of May.

One fourth-floor renovation project, initiated 14 months ago, was finished two months ago, returning 23 beds to service with improved patient care support.

Another project on the same floor, to provide an eight-bed intensive care unit and an intensive care unit for heart cases, was started a year ago. Cost estimates are now being reviewed by the provincial government's Hospital Insurance Service.

The hospital is still waiting for BCHIS approval to spend $10,000 in the Bay Pavilion which will add 22 beds. It has been waiting two months.

The addition of a fifth floor to the hospital's south wing and renovation of the adjacent fifth-floor east block was initiated over four years ago. It was finished in January at a cost of $625,000.

● At St. Joseph's Hospital — plans to renovate surgical facilities went to BCHIS four months ago. Despite three follow-up letters, the hospital is still waiting approval to proceed.

Also in the hands of BCHIS for approval are plans for an intensive care unit to treat burn victims, plans for case rooms and nurseries.

Renovations to pediatric facilities have been approved and tenders are expected shortly. The hospital is working on plans for a prefabricated unit for convalescent patients.

● At Gorge Road Hospital — A contract to build 150 beds for extended care patients will likely be let this spring.

But Health Minister Ralph Loffmark has told the regional hospital board that if bids are over $2,045,000 he has approved for the project, no contract will be approved.

● Rest Haven Hospital replacement — while the regional hospital board has approved purchasing 22 acres in Central Saanich as the site for Rest Haven's replacement, BCHIS hasn't yet.

Instead it has asked for studies to determine site preparation costs.

● St. Mary's Priory — discussions between the regional hospital board and the Sisters of the Order of St. Benedict on development of extended care beds there are continuing.

● Lady Minto Hospital, at Ganges on Salt Spring Island, is slated to get 15 extended care beds. Alterations related to the addition are still under discussion with BCHIS.

Polls Open Until 8 Tonight On Capital Budget Bylaw

Victoria property owners this morning were showing increased enthusiasm in the $6.3 million capital budget referendum.

At noon some 1,178 people had cast ballots. Last June the total number voting in the 12-hours the polls were open was only 3,430.

Deputy returning officer George Merz said he expected the tempo to pick up after 5 p.m.

Some 18,000 voters are eligible and 60 per cent of the votes cast must be favorable if the measure is to pass.

Included in the program are $3.7 million for road improvements, $1 million for waterfront development, $382,000 for pollution control, $633,000 for improving city maintenance yards and $560,000 for fire prevention and protection.

The polls, which close at 8 p.m., are located at the Silver Threads Activity Centre, Centennial Square; Goodwill Enterprises, 220 Bay; James Bay Athletic Association Hall, 205 Simcoe; Sir James Douglas Elementary, Thurlow Road and Oaklands Elementary, 2827 Belmont.

Former Fire Chief Dies at 67

Joseph Law, pioneer Victorian and former Saanich fire chief died this morning at Royal Jubilee Hospital after a brief illness. He was 67.

Law became Saanich fire chief in 1940 after 14 years with the Victoria fire department, remaining in the post until his retirement in 1964. His family moved to Victoria from Scotland in 1906.

Law built the department into a modern, well-equipped unit with eight times the staff at his retirement than when he joined the department.

Law had a reputation for being a cool, no-nonsense leader whose fairness won the respect of his men.

He is survived by his wife Violet and son Bernard, 3700 Casey Dr., a daughter, Mrs. Beverly Montagnaro, three sisters, Mrs. Ruth Bent, Mrs. Catherine Aldred, Mrs. Grace Daniels and three grandchildren all of Victoria.

Experts Cut Down Bid to Kill Trees

A developer's bid to have seven large chestnut trees felled on Orchard Ave. to get a better view for an apartment house being built at 1321 Beach may have been foiled by B.C. Telephone officials and a tree consultant.

Robert McAdams and Clive Piercy of Park Pacific Apartments Ltd. told Oak Bay council's B committee Wednesday that both B.C. Tel officials and tree consultant Sarge Noro, 2170 Fair, agreed with the axing.

Noro denied this today.

"They asked me to look at the trees. They wanted them out. The only problem with those trees is that they're interfering with their view. They're not old or ugly, as they say."

Noro said the developers had asked him to write a letter in support of their bid, but he refused.

★ ★ ★

B.C. Tel spokesman Glynn Jones repudiated the developer's statement that D. P. Morison of B.C. Tel. had told the company that they would be "highly pleased if these trees are removed as they hamper the servicing of these lines."

Jones said that he had checked with Morison, who said that he had merely spoken generally about high trees that do cause maintenance problems.

"We looked at the trees today and they're causing no problem at all. If they eventually did, we'd merely ask Oak Bay council to do the necessary trimming."

In a statement today, McAdams said his company had had "a number of inquiries to date, asking if these trees will be removed as they would only be interested in purchasing a particular suite if it had a view."

He felt that two of the trees would probably have to be removed for the purpose of lobby and driveway access.

The matter will be taken up by Oak Bay council.

Arthur Mayse...

EACH WEDNESDAY morning, eight women who share a thorny problem meet in the Mental Health Centre at Eric Martin Institute. Each is the mother of a child afflicted with one of the gravest and most mystifying psychatric disorders recorded.

It is called autism. The autistic child is condemned to exist in a world of his own. He is neither deaf nor retarded, although he may have been diagnosed as one or the other. But he is turned off, withdrawn, and so removed from normal communication as to be almost unreachable.

If he is to be saved, he must be reached, and this is what the mothers who attend the weekly seminar are striving to do. Their guide is Dr. Phillip G. Ney, a child psychiatrist whose research on autism has brought a certain amount of light into a particularly murky jungle.

Dr. Ney makes no large claims. Autism is still pretty much of a riddle, its cause not yet pinned down. However, Dr. Ney and other probers have worked out certain hypotheses.

One of these is that the autistic child may have been born with a disorder of the brain-mechanism that filters such incoming stimuli as sights and sounds.

Exposed to the total impact of his senses, the child seeks to escape the bombardment through a retreat so extreme that he can become literally unaware of himself.

With Dr. Ney's permission, I sat in on this week's seminar. It was an informal gathering, with ashtrays on the long table, and coffee served in white crockery mugs. Before it got under way, some of the mothers talked to me about their children.

Mrs. C., brisk and determinedly cheerful, was typical in that her son's condition escaped early detection. Through five heart-breaking years of conflicting diagnosis, she and her husband coped as best they could with the symptoms of Roy's disorder.

As a baby, Roy would let himself be held loosely, but fought against any cuddling. When he was a little older, there was no running with outstretched arms to be picked up. He displayed no sign of pain at a bump or scratch, and danger had no meaning for him.

Yet his temper tantrums were even more nerve-shattering than his aimless rocking from side to side, or his absolute refusal to look into even his parents' faces.

But Roy had a potential, and with the nature of his trouble at last revealed, the slow, painful process of bringing him into the world is well under way.

Reward and withdrawal of reward figures in it. So does ignoring.

The temper tantrums, frustration running wild, occur much less frequently now. When Roy is overtaken by a tantrum, Mrs. C. can and does turn herself into a stone wall. More frequently these days, Roy will look into his peoples' eyes and claim his reward (Pennies, cookies or little candies. "We got used to buying Smarties by the pound," says Mrs. C) Also, when he hurts himself, he cries, and that's a sign of progress.

Along with other benefits, the seminars remind these mothers of autistic children that they aren't alone. At this one, progress and failures were reported, and advice sought.

It was a remarkably co-operative searching. Dr. Ney, casual in slacks and grey corduroy jacket, did no more steering than was required of him. At times he explained or clarified: mostly, he contented himself with questions that pointed those who asked them toward answers.

Life becomes even harder for child and parents when the autistic enters the school system. From kindergarten on, he is likely to be bounced from one shool to another. He does not belong with the retarded or emotionally disturbed, and if required to join either group, withdraws deeper into his other world.

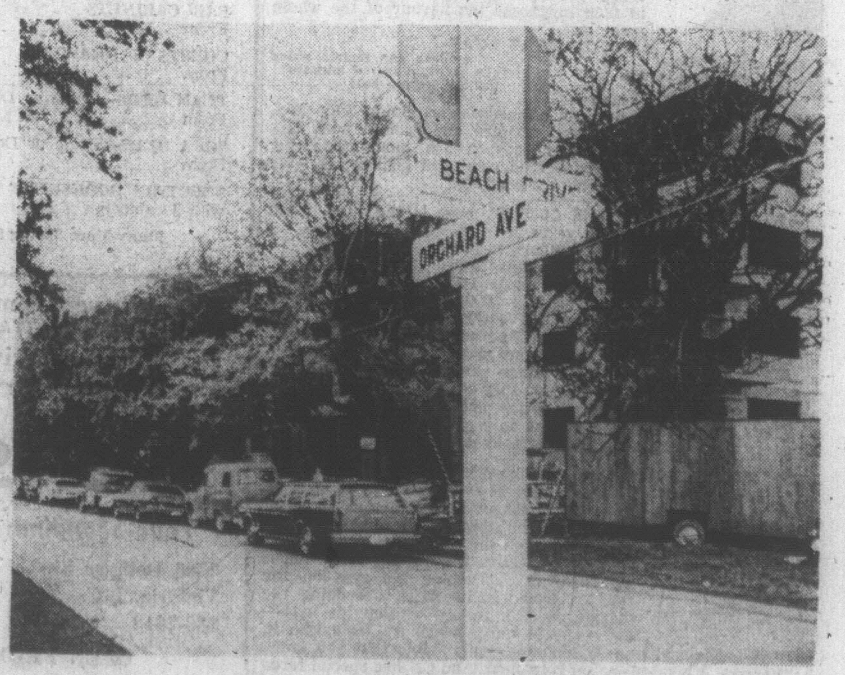
The mothers who met for their fourth seminar, and their husbands at work, are in process of forming a Society for Autistic Children. It will be one of a very few in North America. They are hoping that "a friendly lawyer" — the term is Mrs. C's — will volunteer to help them with the necessary paperwork.

Also, they are desperately in need of a special class, with a teacher trained for the job, in which to enroll their children.

"If a class is formed," said Mrs. C., speaking for all, "there'll be no bother about transport. We'll look after that, and we'll help the teacher."

The point, too long ignored, is that the young autistic can be brought out of himself.

Another point: it is most unlikely that the eight children whose trouble has been identified are the only such sufferers in this area. Two of the mothers in the seminar have given me with their names and telephone numbers. I'll pass these on to any parent who requests them.



'They're Not Old or Ugly'

KNIT AND CHAT — By MAY E. MAC LEAN

Shetland Knitters Used Leather Tishie for Speed

I have told you before that collecting old knitting books is one of my hobbies. I like to visit second hand book stores and libraries whenever I accompany my husband on his travels. I find fascinating reading wherever I am.

One very old book published in England has an unique description of Fair-Isle knitting. The tradition is that the Spanish Armada galleon, the El Gran Griffon, was wrecked off the tiny isle of Fair Isle, halfway between the Orkney and Shetland Isles. (These islands are off the northern tip of Scotland.)

The surviving sailors taught the art of knitting to the native women who copied the Catholic symbolic patterns from the gorgeous knitted silks of the Spanish nobles.

No two Fair Isle jerseys were knitted quite the same. Shetland knitters prided themselves on producing garments with slight variations. Patterns were not written down but passed verbally from mother to daughter.

Many knitters worked from the hank, not wasting precious time in winding balls. Less adept knitters, however, kept the various colors from becoming entangled as they worked by putting the wool in a row of jam jars at their feet.

The tremendous speed at which the professional knitters worked was helped by a knitter's belt, called a "tishie." Made from leather, it had holes drilled in it and was worn around the waist.

The knitter supported one end of a needle in a hole as he worked. Possibly the wool used was much thicker and coarser, making the garment heavier on the needles, or the method of holding the needles was entirely different from today's method.

This week, the pattern is crocheted matching shell and sleeveless dress in sizes 12 to 18. It's the newest look in fashion.

Only two rows of crochet form the pattern for the bodice and only one row forms the circular skirt pattern, so it is both quick and simple to do. A knitting worsted weight of yarn should be used.

To order Leaflet No. 2-70, send 35 cents in coin or money order. Do not send personal cheques, please. Your order must be accompanied by a stamped, fully-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. Send to May E. MacLean. Knit and Chat, in care of The Times, 2631 Douglas Street.

Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering. Allow from two to three weeks for delivery.

This week's pattern is a crocheted dress with a matching shell. The sleeveless bodice has only two rows of crochet in the directions. The circular skirt repeats one row of crochet. The dress, in a knitting worsted weight of yarn, is simple and quick to do.

Canada's Child-Killers: Traffic, Home Accidents

OTTAWA (CP) — Traffic and home accidents are the two biggest child-killers, taking 1,424 lives in 1968, says the Canada Safety Council.

Another 535 children died in accidents ranging from drownings to air crashes in 1968—the latest year for which figures are available, said the council in releasing statistics on child deaths before Child Safety Week May 3-9.

Child traffic fatalities totalled 826 in 1968. Of these, 574 died in the five-to-14 age group.

The council reported 508 of the 1,289 pedestrian fatalities were children—about 39 per cent of the total.

The council said children get used to traffic movement quickly, but judge speed and distance poorly.

Pre-school children should be supervised and should understand the importance of practising pedestrian traffic safety rules, the council said. These were the best methods of cutting traffic fatalities among children.

HOMES ARE RISKY

Home accidents led to 598 child deaths, said the council. One of the major killers was suffocation, resulting in the death of 213 babies under the age of a year. Another leading cause was fire and explosion, which killed 217 children under 15.

Others killed in the home died in bathtub drownings, falls, poisonings, burns, blows from falling objects and firearm accidents.

Most suffocation deaths are due to throwing up food or smothering in bed, said the council. Airtight thin plastic should not be used in crib or carriage, as it could suffocate a child in less than one minute.

The major reason for fire deaths was leaving children unattended in the home.

The council said 24 children under 15 died from poisoning. On the average, every 15 minutes in Canada a child was accidentally poisoned.

Tokyo Brides Go Skirtless

TOKYO (AP) — Girls studying at a Tokyo dressmaking school envisage the 21st-century Japanese bride as a scantily attired little number with a trousseau including skirts so short they'd be called skirtless skirts, revealing swim suits, and no underwear. The consensus of 200 girls interviewed in a survey also predicted the traditional kimono will be rare and costly.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Disordered Daughter

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Is there no way a mother can tell a lovely married daughter that she is the world's worst housekeeper?

She is a perfectly wonderful young woman, but her house and children look like the wrath of God!

She came from a clean home and was taught how to do things, but for some reason she never quite "gets around" to doing them.

The iron and the needle and thread are complete strangers to her. She does her laundry only when she runs out of clean clothes.

Fortunately, her husband is a very patient man, but I'm afraid one of these days he will become disgusted and refuse to come home to such a disorganized mess.

Now, how do I tell this to my daughter who has never spoken a harsh word to me? She is sweet and kind. I hate to hurt her.

Perhaps she will read this and I won't have to. — Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: And what if she doesn't read this? Don't wait for her husband to lose patience and "refuse to come home." It may be too late then. Don't rule out the possibility that your daughter may have a physical problem. A thorough check-up may be in order. Have a mother-daughter talk and tell her what you've told me. It would be a kindness.

DEAR ABBY: That letter in you column singed ODDBALL could have been written by me, only he was a man, and I'm a woman. ODDBALL wrote that both his parents were dead and he hadn't been to the cemetry to visit their graves because it "tore him apart" to go out here. He further said he'd been a good son to them—so it wasn't a guilty conscience. He also said his brothers and sisters went out to the cemetery regularly and said it made them feel "good"—but he just couldn't do it.

His question: "Should I go so my family won't think I'm disrespectful to the memory of my parents?"

Your answer: "No. The time to visit parents is when they're living. Stay away and don't feel guilty."

Abby, that's what I've wanted to hear for 20 years. God bless you. May you live to be 100. Sign this — Another Oddball.

DEAR ODDBALL: Thanks. I'll settle for a lot less.

DEAR ABBY: Isn't it impolite to come right out and ask a 40-year-old man why he isn't married? — Roland.

DEAR ROLAND: Yes. Especially if you think you know.

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the little old lady who "borrowed" her neighbor's morning paper, read it, and didn't always remember to return it reminded me of my own experience:

My neighbor is also a sweet little old lady who gets up early in the morning, takes my morning paper, reads it, but doesn't always return it. She'd say, "I don't want to subscribe to the newspaper because I may not live another year."

Well, that was 10 years ago, and she's still bumming my papers. — Mineral Point.

DEAR ABBY: My parents died when I was an infant. I know what cemetery they are buried in, but there are no markers or headstones on their graves. I went to the people in charge of the cemetery and told them that I wanted to buy a headstone or marker with my parents' names on it, and I was told it wasn't possible because my parents were buried in a pair of plots paid for by a church organization, and only a member of that organization could give permission to mark those graves.

I went to that church and spoke to the priest, and he said the organization had long been dissolved and none of the members were living, and he could not give me permission.

I have talked to many people and no one can tell me what to do. Can you?—Mrs. B.

DEAR MRS. B.: Talk to a lawyer. If there is a legitimate reason why your parents' graves cannot be marked, someone should be able to tell you what it is. If there is no existing reason why you can't put up a headstone, then your lawyer will protect your right to do so.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Bachelor Seeks Protection From 'Pugnacious' Widow

CHICAGO (UPI) — Henry Fokt, a bachelor of 42, says the gleam in the eye of a certain widow looks more to him like a glint.

He asked for court protection last week.

Fokt's attorney told Chancery Court Judge Donald J. O'Brien that Mrs. Josephine Baczyk, 37, a "very attractive" widow, has been using "many devious schemes to snare" him into marriage.

Fokt said he has no use for marriage. But, he claimed, Mrs. Baczyk has threatened to kill him if he doesn't take the plunge.

"Most widows are either merry or docile," Attorney Stanley Stoller said. "The defendant is aggressive and pugnacious."

As an example, the attorney said, Mrs. Baczyk once entered Fokt's home to advance her plan to get him to wed. When Fokt demurred, the woman "broke each and every dish in his pantry and threw them on the floor, leaving his kitchen in a shambles."

At least a hundred times, he said, Mrs. Baczyk has stood in front of his home and yelled at him because he rejected her "violent, amorous attentions."

Fokt said Mrs. Baczyk has told him that if he doesn't make her his bride, then she will see to it that he never gets the opportunity to leave another widow on his own hook.

"The plaintiff fears this pugnacious widow and honestly believes she will do as she has told him," Fokt's suit said.

Fokt asked the judge to order the widow to leave him alone, and to desist from calling him at the travel agency he runs — currently downhill because she calls him at least twice a day and ties up his telephone.

MONTREAL, April 30th. — Of the many recipes I've tried for meat loaf, this is our family favourite. The Lipton Onion Soup Mix imparts just the right onion flavour — in fact, heightens the flavour of the whole meat loaf.

MAN-SIZE MEAT LOAF

2 eggs slightly beaten
1½ cups soft bread crumbs
¾ cup warm water
1 package Lipton Onion Soup Mix
7½-ounce can tomato sauce
2 tbsps. prepared mustard
2 lbs. ground beef

Beat eggs in mixing bowl, add crumbs, water, Onion Soup Mix, ½ cup tomato sauce, prepared mustard and ground beef. Mix thoroughly. Shape into loaf or pack in pan; pour remaining tomato sauce over top. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for 1 to 1½ hours. Makes 4 generous servings.

"BEAT THE MOTH TO THE CLOTH". Now is the time, when you are storing your winter garments, furs, ski clothing and children's woollens, to protect them against destructive moths. And I know of no more effective, safe and economical aids than PARA-ZENE MOTH CRYSTALS and NAP-LENE FULL STRENGTH MOTH BALLS. These fine products, made by Record Chemical, are guaranteed to kill moths and moth larvae when used as directed on the container. Pick up Nap-Lene Moth Balls and Para-Zene Moth Crystals to-day and guard your valuable woollens against moth damage for only pennies. Para-Zene Moth Crystals make a wonderful household deodorizer, too!

WITH MANY OF OUR HUSBANDS working under pressure five days (and several evenings) a week, it is up to us to suggest ways for 'our man' to relax. Like taking the train when a business trip is planned. When he boards a CANADIAN NATIONAL train, there's no worry about bad weather... keeping his eyes on the road... traffic lights. With CN doing the driving, he can relax — stretch his legs — eat man-size meals when he feels like it. CN trains are really so comfortable and reliable that you know he'll arrive at his destination refreshed. And CN has special fares for family travelling that are most appealing, too!

Many Factors Influence Choice of Pill

Side effects from oral contraceptives can be partially overcome with more careful selection of the type of pill used, B.C. family physicians were told Wednesday.

"No pill is perfectly safe — not even aspirin," said Dr. Ralph Benson, chairman of the obstetrics and gynaecology department of the University of Oregon. He spoke during the third and final day of the 16th annual scientific session for family physicians at the Empress Hotel.

"There are problems with the pill but I think we can overcome these by selecting the right type of pill for the patient," he said.

For example, high estrogen content may cause significant side-effects such as nausea and nervous tension, which could be alleviated by lowering the dosage or changing the pill.

Dr. Benson also recommended that the woman's age, hormone balance, blood type and family medical history be carefully noted when prescribing the pill.

A and B blood types clot more easily than other types, he cautioned, and the pill is sometimes assumed to be the cause of blood clots in women.

As for age, Dr. Benson said he was against giving a 14-year-old patient the pill because of physical immaturity. However, a woman who has reached the menopause may benefit from a high estrogen pill to compensate for a natural decrease in hormone production.

Recent American investigations into the pill have raised the comment that women have been used as experimental beings, Dr. Benson noted.

"It has been said that women make excellent guinea pigs. They feed themselves, they clean their own cages and they take their own medicine," Dr. Benson commented.

He admitted that not all the effects of oral contraceptives are known. This does make women part of an experiment.

"But it's unfair to compare side effects of the pill to side effects of pregnancy. The real alternative to the pill is another kind of contraceptive."

The use of a diaphragm, jelly or foam bring excellent results "if the patient is well-motivated," Dr. Benson said. Interuterine devices are rapidly improving and sterilization is another method "not used enough."

And, Dr. Benson concluded his talk, there is one perfect contraceptive: "The word no."

Medical Panel Discusses Abortion Law Changes

A pregnant woman exposed to German measles will find it easier to obtain an abortion today, a University of British Columbia obstetrics professor said Wednesday.

Dr. A. D. Claman addressed the 16th annual scientific session of B.C. family physicians. He was a member of a panel on pre-natal and post-natal care.

Exposure to German measles or rubella in the early stages of pregancy can cause foetal damage. Because this is a well-known fact, said Dr. Claman, the anxiety to the mother can disrupt her mental health.

Recent changes in the Criminal Code of Canada now allow abortion performed by a doctor if a woman's mental or physical well-being is threatened.

"By now we should be able to establish mental health reasons to abort a patient with rebellic exposure," said Dr. Claman.

"It doesn't matter about the laws," he told the doctors attending the last day of the sessions. "The social climate will allow you to do abortions."

Panel member Dr. B. A. Higniell of Vancouver commented that a doctor could be liable to a lawsuit if he knows of exposure and permits a damaged child to be born.

Panel members answered a wide variety of questions thrown at them by moderator Dr. Donald Farquhar. Also taking part were Dr. Isaac Perlman and Dr. F. T. Sigurdson, all of Vancouver.

Dr. Farquhar, commenting on new techniques to monitor a baby during labor, said every hospital in B.C. should be equipped to take pre-natal blood samples and hearings of the foetal heartbeat.

"I think it is a tragedy that we can get astronauts' heartbeats from the moon and we cannot get the foetal heartbeat of every baby born."

Dr. Farquhar asked Dr. Claman if an anesthesiologist should always be present during labor.

"Absolutely," replied Dr. Claman. "If men were having babies they wouldn't tolerate any old anesthetic method available. They'd demand the best."

FASHION SHOW FOR MUSIC SCHOLARSHIP

Model Sandra Hoey mixed a mini dress and a maxi coat, and then went looking for a reaction in the back yard of the C. Y. Spratts, 3000 Rutland Road. Mrs. Spratt doesn't seem at all miffed by the mix, even when it's up her tree. The outfit will be one of the fashions shown by Eaton's at a coffee party Wednesday, May 6, at the Spratt home. Showings will be at 11 a.m. and 12 noon. The event is sponsored by the Victoria chapter of the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto. Proceeds will go to the alumni scholarship fund. New Premier's Campaign Interrupted Wife's Studies

By GERARD ALARIE

QUEBEC (CP) — Andree Bourassa is fortunate she is an early riser and a "late-to-bed person." It helps if you decide to accompany your husband during an exhaustive month-long provincial election campaign.

And it helps, too, if you like politics.

"Politics appeal to me," Mrs. Bourassa says. "They interest me and I get involved."

She asked her husband, Robert, 36-year-old leader of the Quebec Liberal party and new provincial premier, for only three days off in the gruelling four-week campaign schedule preceding Wednesday's Quebec general elections.

She needed those days, April 14-16, to study for a university examination in Greek and Latin history.

Mr. Bourassa Wednesday led the Liberals to a resounding victory, winning at least 71 seats in the 108-seat national assembly.

For Mrs. Bourassa the election campaign was not much different from the cross-Quebec tour her husband made a few months ago in seeking support for his bid for the party leadership. He was elected Liberal leader in January.

Then, as now, Mrs. Bourassa had to give up part-time studies at the University of Quebec, Montreal campus, to travel with her husband.

"I am completely at the disposal of Robert's career," she says.

FROM WEALTHY FAMILY

Mrs. Bourassa's casual blonde hair styles and slender figure give her a youthful appearance. She is the mother of 10-year-old Francois and four-year-old Michele. She speaks softly, simply and serenely.

She is 36—the same age as her husband.

During the campaign for the party leadership, opponents of Mr. Bourassa tried to make an issue of the fact that his wife belongs to the wealthy Simard family of Sorel, Que., one-time owners of Marine Industries Ltd.

ANDREA BOURASSA

Referring to her childhood, Mrs. Bourassa said: "My father, the late Edouard Simard, insisted his children be raised in a manner similar to the way other Sorel families reared their offspring."

Andree met Robert in 1956 duringhis last year in law school at the University of Montreal.

"From that time, and even before, Robert had resolved to have a political career.

PLENTY OF WARNING

"As a result I had plenty of warning of what was to happen and is happening—the life of a woman whose husband is away from home five days a week, running for the leadership, contesting an election campaign."

The Simards of Sorel have been involved in the Liberal party for decades, helping with financial contributions. They had a big part in this election too.

Claude Simard, 31, a businessman and brother of Andree, was the successful Liberal candidate in Richelieu riding, held previously by the governing Union Nationale.

"It was Robert himself who insisted that Claude, who had never dreamed of getting into active politics, run in Richelieu," Andree said. "After all, this riding is ours...."

Abortion Clinics Checked

LONDON (AP) — The British government began cracking down today on private abortion clinics that have been getting rich since the abortion law was liberalized in 1967.

Social Services Minister Richard Crossman said clinics no longer will be allowed to solicit foreign patients at airports or to send women home prematurely if they cannot afford post-operative care.

Crossman also said government inspectors will check the clinics' medical equipment and their records to see whether they are charging exorbitant fees.

Crossman renewed the licences of 46 private abortion clinics, but for three months instead of the usual year. He cancelled without explanation the licence of one London clinic where as many as 20 abortions a day had been performed.

The new regulations do not apply to public hospitals, which are supervised by the health ministry. The operation is free there for British women, but waiting lists are long.

Patients have complained about poor treatment and lack of attention at some of the private clinics. Concern over such complaints and over the increasing number of abortions performed in Britain led to an attempt in Parliament last month to tighten the abortion law.

A bill to increase government supervision of abortion services was talked down in the House of Commons, although it had the backing of the British Medical Association and the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

GENERALS HAPPIER WITH PERMISSION

U.S. Troops Now Able to Chase Cong Into Cambodia

AP News Analysis
By PETER ARNETT

SAIGON (AP) — The bland, unscarred landscape of Cambodia that stretches westwards beyond the cratered rice fields and blackened jungles of Vietnam long has tempted U.S. military commanders.

Many an American general has shaken his fist in frustration, cursing Viet Cong and North Vietnamese sanctuaries across the border that fed men and supplies into South Vietnam.

"If only we could go in, we could cut their jugular vein," said one general hovering over War Zone C in his helicopter earlier this year.

"Just look at those hills," said another in the central highlands. "Perfect for our firebases, if only we got the word to go."

This week Washington gave the word.

REFUSED AUTHORITY

This new chapter in the Vietnam war began March 18 when the Cambodian government and national assembly deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the chief of state.

Sihanouk refused to authorize South Vietnamese and U.S. forces to cross the border because he did not want the war to spread among his 5,000,000 people, even though he was growing increasingly unhappy with the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces on his territory.

With Sihanouk out of the way, the South Vietnamese moved in almost immediately, first with artillery support for Cambodian border patrols fighting the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong, then with ground forces crossing the border to destroy the guerrilla camps.

The surprise ingredient in the escalation is the commitment of Americans to the new battle zone.

The commitment of American planes and artillery to support Vietnamese operations across the border may indicate intentions to go much deeper into Cambodia than just the border sanctuaries.

The expansion of operations is aimed at making quick gains for the Saigon government rather than helping out the beleaguered Cambodian regime of Premier Lon Nol in Phnom Penh.

"It is happening exactly as we hoped it would," said one senior American, talking about the advances the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese have been making toward Phnom Penh—away from the border.

"Every time one of them is aimed toward a Cambodian he is aimed away from us. We are directly benefiting from the chaotic Cambodian scene. It is helping our war, pacification and Vietnamization."

Big Ownership of Media Not Dangerous—Tories

OTTAWA (CP) — A Toronto group of Conservatives says it doesn't accept the view that bigness is bad when it comes to ownership concentration in the news media.

"We don't share the excessive concerns about present or probable degrees of concentration of ownership which have been expressed by others," the group says in a brief to the special Senate committee on mass media.

The brief's eight signers are members of the Toronto Progressive Conservative forum, which organizes policy studies on federal matters for the party.

The brief is one of a series being released this week by the committee which finished its public hearings last Friday.

Signers are Alan Heisey, Lawrence Heisey, Murray Maynard, Mrs. Betty Knight, Arthur Harnett, Jules Neil Kronis, Robert Leslie Radford and H. Donald Guthrie.

Two of them, Alan Heisey and Mr. Maynard, appended a minority report accusing Toronto area media of giving too little coverage to Conservative activities.

The main brief asks that government steer away from any licensing of the free press in the name of limiting media ownership concentration.

"And we ask the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to avoid rules which would automatically preclude cross ownerships of broadcast and other media in a single city, or as a national principle."

Everyone would oppose ownership of all Toronto media by one person.

"But we recognize that owners with creative talents in one medium can make valuable contributions through ownership and operation of other media."

The group sees no reason for government interference to limit the size of print media chain operations.

"To split up or limit domestic chain operations could hurt Canadian competitiveness as print media become increasingly international in operations in future years."

The group accepts the right of Toronto dailies to own weeklies in the suburbs, but feels the mastheads of the subsidiary publications should make clear who the real owners are. This principle should apply to all Canadian newspapers.

Also suggested is a tax holiday for a period of years for new publications to permit the development of a counter-balance to group operators.

Save money right now on pairs of our new Fiberglas-Belted WIDEGUARD Tires—built to give Double-the-Mileage of ordinary Tires. Fiberglas belts give a big edge on traction and handling, because the tread stays flat and in full contact with the road, always.

- You get better handling on the curves—sidewalls take up stress of tight curves
- Stop in shorter distances, because tread stays open for a firmer grip on the road—this means better traction
- Your WIDEGUARD Tires will last Twice as long as ordinary tires. Belts keep tread from squirming on the road—stopping the main cause of tire wear

GUARANTEED Against ALL Tire Failures for life of tread, PLUS Guaranteed to wear for 36 Months

NOT ENOUGH MONEY

Hard Times Ahead for Children's Society

By SAM EGUAVOEN

The B.C. Society for Crippled Children is facing hard times: there isn't enough money to carry out the society's work.

Last year, the organization budgeted $350,000 for its services and ran a deficit of $40,000. This year is expected to be worse: the budget is already showing a deficit of $70,000.

These facts came from A. E. Tomkinson, 51, a Victorian recently elected vice-president of the society.

PUBLIC SUPPORT

At the moment, the society operates on money derived from public support during the Easter Seal Campaign each year, a yearly stipend from B.C. government (last year $25,000), bequests in people's wills and from token fees the society charges for its services.

Founded in the early 1950s its main service to the disabled has been transportation. It has its own fleet of 32 buses — the well-known Easter Seal buses — which transport crippled children and other handicapped people to schools. Six of these are in Victoria and 26 on the mainland. Tomkinson said it cost the organization $175,000 a year to run these buses which transport over 1,000 people a day.

The society also runs three camps in July and August for more than 600 children a year.

FIRST HAND

Then there is the Easter Seal House in Vancouver which gives first-hand treatment to patients. The house can accommodate six parent-child groups at a time. The society charges a fee for this but, according to Tomkinson, the fees can be waived in needy cases.

As a fourth service the society provides patient-care for handicapped children — for example, the provision of such things as walking aids. This service is carried out in association with the Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation — another service organization interested in the rehabilitation of handicapped adults.

The society has lately been provided money to assist the Cleft-lip Palate Society — an organization which looks after infants with hare-lips and similar ailments.

The swimming program operates with the aid of the navy base in Esquimalt. The navy provides the pool and instructing staff while the society organizes the program and transportation.

TOMKINSON
. . . in the red

Tomkinson does not consider these services enough, saying: "There is no end to the services we can provide if we get sufficient funds."

Born in Grinrod, B.C., in 1919, Tomkinson went to school in Salmon Arm before joining the Royal Canadian Air Force in 1940. After the war, he did a year's science course at Victoria College before returning to the RCAF as a navigator. He retired from the air force in 1965 as a squadron leader, and came to Victoria that same year.

He joined the B.C. society for Crippled Children is 1966 — a natural consequence of his membership of the Lions Club — he was made chairman of the local Easter Seal committee; later that year he became a director of the society. In 1969-1970, he was chairman of the Easter Seal Campaign for the province.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

ANIMAL WORLD. 7:30 p.m, Channel 4. "The Great Red Apes." Bill Burrud's animal series opens its summer run with a show about the funny looking, photogenic orangutan living in a Borneo animal preserve. Closeups of angutans slurping milk and rolling about in gunny-sack sleeping bags will charm the kids. Even simple shots of the red apes staring at the camera work. You can't beat monkeys hanging about, and they outdo their host in the "cute" department.

★ ★ ★

JIM NABORS SHOW. 8:00 p.m., Channel 7; 9:30 p.m., Channel 12. (Repeat). The combination of Wayne Newton and Jim Nabors would seem to strike a mass audience chord. Wayne offers "Blowin' in the Wind," joins Jim for a lengthy medley, and plays a prominent part in the main production number of "San Francisco." Regular Ronnie Schell gives an impression of an interior decorator; Nabors, Karen Morrow and Frank Sutton get into another "Brothers-in-Law" hassle; and Jim, to stay current, even sings a couple of tunes from "Hair."

★ ★ ★

THAT GIRL. 8:00 p.m., Channel 4. "The Snow Must Go On." (Repeat). A totally mad situation provides Marlo Thomas and company with an amusing escapade. While Ann and her boy friend are at the airport to see her parents off on vacation, a blinding blizzard develops and everyone gets stranded. The twist here is the ingenious way Ann manages to keep an audition appointment via long distance.

★ ★ ★

DRAGNET. 9:30 p.m., Channel 5. "Personnel — The Shooting." (Repeat). Good dramatic entry. Two policemen are shot in the line of duty — one a veteran and the other a probationary officer. As they fight for their lives in the hospital, we see the reactions of their wives who must always wonder whether this is the day their husbands may die.

IRONSIDE. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "Alias Mr. Braitwaite." (Repeat). Ironside and his staff are trying to snare a con artist who has bilked a lot of trusting San Francisco ladies, including Mark's aunt, out of their life savings. It's stretching things a bit to believe that the ladies could have been duped by the extremely obvious con, but it is amusing to watch the cat-and-mouse game played against the background of a luxurious resort, as Ironside and crew try to hook the egotistical swindler played by Joe Campanella.

★ ★ ★

THIS IS TOM JONES. 7:30 p.m., Channel 8; 9:00 p.m., Channel 4. (Repeat). Tom's cast boasts the ever popular Tony Bennett, attractive Vikki Carr, and skits from the Ace Trucking Company comedy troup. Some of the songs of the hour are "I Believe" (Tom Jones), "If I Ruled the World" (Tony Bennett), "Eternity" (Vikki Carr), and "Once in My Life" from the trio.

★ ★ ★

DEAN MARTIN. 8:30 p.m., Channel 8; 10:00 p.m., Channel 5. (Repeat). Goldie Hawn giggles, brays and plays dumb as Dino's special guest. When Goldie breaks up, Martin breaks up, especially in a "King Kong" sketch in which the gorilla insists on an elevator trip up the Empire State Building accompanied by Hawn and Dino, the elevator boy. Miss Hawn plays it straight singing a version of "Star," and muffs words with her host explaining why it's better to be dumb. Semi-regular Dom DeLuise appears as the cumbersome magician, Dominick the Great, Dennis Weaver sings one song, and Dean croons beauties like "Little Green Apples."

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30—Channel 12: Devil Doorway (1950 Western), Robert Taylor, Louis Calhern, Paula Raymond. An Indian veteran of the Civil War returns to find injustice and tragedy for his people and fights to aid them.

5:30—Channel 13: The Lion of Amalfi (1963 Italian Adventure), Vittorio Gassman. A guerrilla band tries to fight Norman occupation of Republic of Amalfi in the 11th century.

7:30—Channel 12: The Cool World (1954 Drama) Hampton Clanton, Carl Lee. Desperation and violence in a Harlem ghetto.

9 p.m.—Channel 7: Operation Amsterdam (1959 English Adventure), Peter Finch, Eva Bartok, Tony Britton. A semi-factual drama about a secret mission in Amsterdam in 1940.

11 p.m.—Channel 11: Belle Le Grand (1951 Western), Vera Ralston, John Carroll. Gambling queen is plagued by her ex-husband.

11:30—Channel 7: The House of Fear (1945 Mystery), Basil Rathbone. When several members of a club meet with violent demise, Sherlock Holmes is called in.

11:40—Channel 2: Term of Trial (1962 English Drama), Laurence Olivier, Simone Signoret, Sarah Miles. A student's accusations complicate the lives of a school teacher and his wife.

12:01—Channels 6 and 8: The Ape Woman (1965 Italian Drama), A fast-buck operator exploits a woman as a freak attraction. Commentary on human greed.

1:05—Channel 5: Drums of Tahita (1954 Adventure), Dennis O'Keefe, Patricia Medina. An American adventurer and a show girl smuggle arms in the fight for independence of Tahiti.

Medics May Attack Fat Foods Soon

It may be only a year or so before the medical profession has enough evidence to go after food manufacturers whose products contain high amounts of heart disease-producing fats, the 16th annual conference of B.C. family physicians was told Wednesday.

Victoria cardiologist Dr. George Woodwark told the conference that products of the packaged food industry and hamburger stands are forming an increasingly large part of the American diet.

Woodwark also said the public must be made aware of the speed necessary in treating heart disorders.

"Waiting an hour or so after the onset of a severe crushing chest pain will not help," he said. The symptom usually indicates serious heart trouble and the victim should get to the nearest hospital emergency ward immediately.

Woodwark also spoke of the coronary care program centered at Royal Jubilee Hospital. It starts right in the home, where the ambulance attendant attaches a cardiac monitor to the patient before he is even moved to the vehicle.

In that way, a record of the patient's heart activity is transmitted to Royal Jubilee by radio while the patient is en route.

By the time the patient arrives in the emergency ward, the hospital staff has an idea of the nature of the disease and is prepared to treat the patient when he arrives.

The monitor is only available in the Saanich ambulance.

In addition to the monitor, Woodwark said, Saanich ambulance attendants will be able to apply a defibrillator to the patient's chest, once certain legal technicalities are overcome.

A defibrillator produces an electric shock which either restarts a stopped heart or corrects erratic rhythm.

He said Royal Jubilee also has equipment to translate sounds of misbehaving hearts in hospitals in Chemainus, Duncan, Ganges, Comox and Tofino.

Woodward said such equipment is invaluable to hospitals unable to afford specialized staff around the clock. The people here can interpret the cardiographs and suggest treatment in a return phone call.

Besides the acute coronary ward where patients are first admitted to the hospital, he said, there is an eight-bed subacute ward meant to ease the transition to the general ward.

In the sub-acute ward, patients can move about as their heart activity is monitored to a panel in the nursing station. An alarm is sounded if a patient runs into trouble.

Patients are encouraged to feed themselves as soon as possible and has them shiffling around within five days. After three months, long after the patient has gone home, he might be able to wak about four miles an hour, said Woodwark.

Woodwark also explained an exciting new development

Guard Called In To Combat Riot At Ohio State

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Small bands of students clashed today with police in the Ohio State University area after seven youths were shot, scores were arrested and National Guard troops were called in to restore order on the campus.

Gov. James A. Rhodes called up 1,200 troops Wednesday, when outbreaks of violence injured more than 50 persons, including 28 policemen, and caused widespread damage.

Spokesmen at University and Grant hospitals said three of those shot were in hospital. Five of those wounded by gunfire were students.

Police said about 200 persons were arrested.

ARREST STARTS IT

The violence apparently started after the arrest of a student leader when a group of youths set up a barricade at a campus entrance.

The students were part of a group which had been picketing eight university buildings and boycotting classes in an effort to get administration officials to negotiate student demands for equal rights for black students and more student representation in university affairs. Ohio State has an enrolment of more than 40,000.

Students started blocking a number of other entrances to the campus. When they refused to disperse police lobbed tear gas.

Youths moved up and down busy High Street on the eastern edge of the campus, smashing windows in shops and restaurants.

Officers began making mass arrests, carting youths off to jail in busloads. The police department said charges ranged from disorderly conduct and resisting arrest to curfew violation.

Former MP Admits Czech Offered Cash

LONDON (Reuters) — William Owen, former Labor Party member of Parliament accused of betraying official secrets, testified Wednesday that a Czechoslovak diplomat offered to pay his expenses in the 1964 British general election.

Owen testified during the eighth day of his trial at London's Old Bailey criminal court.

He said that Czechoslovak diplomat Robert Husak was keen to assist his election. He told the court he refused the offer.

The prosecution has charged that Owen received £2,300 from Husak and another Czechoslovak diplomat in return for spilling secrets that came his way as a member of the House of Commons estimates committee.

Owen admitted receiving money but said he never passed any secret information.

The trial continues.

Music Council To Discuss Vital Issues

OTTAWA (CP) — Will La Boheme still be regarded as a classic is 2001? Will homes be substituted for concert halls, making multi-million dollar arts centres obsolete?

These are two of the many questions to be discussed at the annual meeting of the Canadian Music Council at the National Arts Centre here May 14 to 17.

The meeting will be a forum for discussion rather than a fact-finding session, president John Roberts of Toronto told a news conference Wednesday.

Theme of the conference is The Musician in 2001.

Concerts by contralto Maureen Forrester and by La Societe de Musique Contemporaine du Quebec, are included in the three-day program, which is open to the public upon payment of a registration fee. Between 150 and 200 delegates are expected to attend.

Cambodia Army Base Resembles Farm Scene

By ROBERT G. KAISER

LOUNG VEK MILITARY DEPOT, Cambodia (WP) — this base is the logistical headquarters of the Cambodian army.

The base at Loung Vek was built with United States aid nearly ten years ago, when there was still a large American military aid mission in Cambodia.

★ ★ ★

The colonel in charge here studied logistics at the Aberdeen Proving Ground outside of Baltimore in 1961 and 1962.

He acknowledged to visitors this week that the Cambodian army needs supplies, and he expressed hope that the United States would provide them.

This base about 20 miles north of Phnom Penh resembles a large American dairy farm built on the site of an automobile graveyard. The dead vehicles, at least 200 of them, are mostly American trucks of World War two vintage that are rotting in rows in the tropical air. They sit rusting in the sun, windshields smashed, tires flat or missing, a forlorn tribute to the Cambodian army's immobility — one of its biggest problems in trying to cope with the Vietnamese Communists.

★ ★ ★

The farmyard atmosphere is provided by large buildings that look like the barns and outbuildings of a successful industrial farm in the American Midwest. Half a dozen of them, which house whatever the Cambodians have in the way of uniforms and other army materiel, are copies of big dairy barns. Four other large structures house the Cambodian maintenance system. The few hundred trucks and armored vehicles this country's army does have are kept in shape — or in limbo — here.

Speaking in the clear French that almost all Camobian officers have mastered, the colonel recounted the supplies his army already does have. His list sounded like the itinerary of an unusual world tour: Arms from the United States, Russia, Communist China, France, Britain and Czechoslovakia.

★ ★ ★

"It is difficult to co-ordinate all of them," the colonel said. And it would be difficult to replace them with new American equipment, he added, but he was ready to try.

"We have worked with the Americans before," he noted, "and we could work with them again.

★ ★ ★

Visitors to Loung Vek saw no sign that Cambodia is at war. The repair garages looked like factories on a quiet Sunday. Men milled around the large supply sheds, but there was no sign of trucks that might be taking supplies to the fast-growing Cambodian army in the field.

Cambodian officials here could name only one American commodity that they could use at once—ammunition for the many old American carbines still in use in the Cambodian army.

Most of Cambodia's arms are of Communist manufacture, and ammunition for almost all of them is reportedly in short supply. The country's main ammunition dump is located on this base, but visitors were not allowed to get anywhere near it.

★ ★ ★

Here as elsewhere in this country, the Cambodians speak longingly of American assistance. "All the soldiers want American aid," my interpreter said after talking with men at Loung Vek.

The point was made more subtly but more convincingly by a soldier we picked up who was hitchiking into Phnom Penh. He bragged of the courage and aggressiveness of his battalion, neither of which had been proven in battle, but admitted that they needed more weapons. We have not got any Amreican weapons yet," he said.

He said it as though he expected that the situation would change at any time.

Plastics Workers Vote to Return

WALLACEBURG, Ont. (CP) — Workers at North American Plastics Ltd. who went on strike against the automotive components manufacturer two years ago voted Wednesday to return to work.

About 80 of the striking members of Local 251, United Auto Workers, narrowly ratified a contract which one union official said will give employees grievance procedures, job postings and seniority rights for the first time.

Ted Oana, UAW international representative, said the union has received notice from at least 100 striking employees showing they favor a return to work.

Although the contract, tentatively agreed upon Tuesday in Windsor, offers workers better job security, no wage negotiations were considered. Striking workers will return to their former wage scales, increased by about 20 cents an hour, as a result of company wage hikes.

The contract, ratified Wednesday night, will be the first to be signed between the company and the union.

Although the union was certified as bargaining agent for plant workers Nov. 29, 1967, talks on a contract broke down a year later and an agreement was never reached.

Then began a lengthy process whereby attempts were made to decertify the union, culminating in rejection in March this year by the Ontario Labor Relations Board of an application to hold a decertification vote. Talks between the company and union, presided over by a provincial labor mediator, resumed April 3.

Bennett to Lead B.C. Delegation To Expo 70

Premier W. A. C. Bennett and a party of about half a dozen will represent B.C. at Osaka 70 in Japan for British Columbia Day, May 28.

Final makeup of the group is not set but it is understood Bennett will be accompanied by Deputy Provincial Secretary Lawrie Wallace, two or three cabinet ministers and freelance photographer Jim Ryan.

A spokesman for the premier's office said it is a "possibility" that Ryan will join the group as official photographer.

The group is expected to leave May 25 and return shortly after the event.

Contract Signed

WASHINGTON (CP) — Tecsult International Ltd., a Montreal firm of consulting engineers, has signed a contract here with the World Bank for a feasibility study of the Republic of Congo's Congo-Oceon Railway. the contract is "in excess" of $1,000,000, with the bank putting up about three-quarters of that amount and the government of the former French colony the remainder.

HOME GARDEN

Lovely Fragrance of Daphne

By HILDA BEASTALL

Daphne means fragrance to a gardener. The only one in the genus which does not live up to this reputation, in my experience, is the green flowered winter Daphne laureola. Garden writers tell us they have detected fragrance in this after sunset on a winter's day, even in the house after dark. But with all this in mind, still no luck.

Hilda

Just now in April and May, several of these colorful, scented plants are in bloom. Most often seen is Daphne cneorum (pronounced nee-orum, a Greek word of unknown origin), a 10-inch bushy little shrub with its neat green leaves entirely obscured by masses of small tubular pink flowers.

While liking perfect drainage in winter, most daphnes also like a leafy loam from which to draw nourishment and which will hold moisture around thier roots in our dry summers.

This is true of D. cneorum. We most often see it growing at its best in a pocket of soil held by rocks near a path or in some other raised position. It likes sun to ripen the new growths before frost.

Large plants can be encouraged by pegging down the stems as they sprawl. First heap well rotted leafmould under the stems, then anchor some of the longest by placing stones each side of the growing tip—one stone to hold the stem down into the leafmould, the other to keep the tip upright.

This is also a method of propagation. When roots are found to have formed, the stem can be severed and we have a new plant.

Tolerating shad for part of the day there is D. blagayana with creamy white scented flowers. This is really entirely prostrate, growing sideways instead of up.

Farrer, the granddaddy of rock garden enthusiasts, wrote that tossing a stone in among the stems every time of passing would make a better plant. The stones create a cool moist rootrum.

While these two daphnes are evergreen, some are only partially so. The lovely four-foot D. burkwoodi will lose its leaves with us in most winters, but is amazingly hardy.

This is a hybrid between D. cneorum and D. caucasica, probably accounting for its extra hardiness. Flowers are pink.

Another partial evergreen is D. odora, a three foot rather angular shrub, seen in concrete planters in some of the shelterd local shopping malls. Leaves are fairly large for a daphne, either dark green or green edged with cream in one variety. Flowers are purplish rose, and so scented that you are aware of them before seeing them. This often blooms in a mild February.

The last of my list is a charmer called D. retusa. My two small plants have so far not produced bloom, though eight years old.

LOSS of both legs fails to keep Jack Cunningham, 81, from the life of a nomad. Here he sits on sidewalk and sells pencils in Riverside, Calif. Cunningham, who grosses about $20 a day, travels by bus and stays in hotels on his sales route. He has no home. He say he hasn't stayed a week in any place for 10 years. (AP Wirephoto.)

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Northwest Rebellion Speeded CPR Project

By BOB BOWMAN

It has been said that the CPR should build a monument to Louis Riel, as Manitoba has decided to do, because the Northwest rebellion in 1885 saved the CPR from bankruptcy. Prime Minister Macdonald was able to get Parliament to agree on new financial arrangements that provided the railway with an extra $5,000,000 in the nick of time.

However, there was another situation that made it urgent to complete the railway to the Pacific. On April 30, 1885, it was believed that there was going to be war between Britian and Russia. Newspapers were headlining this possibility as well as the Northwest rebellion.

The possibility of war with Russia had already altered the route of the transcontinental. Originally it was supposed to cross the prairies farther north, through Selkirk rather than Winnipeg, and go to Edmonton instead of Calgary. The Edmonton-Vancouver route through the Rockies, now used by the CNR, has far easier grades than the Roger's Pass route between Calgary and Vancouver, now used by the CPR.

The danger of war with Russia was one of the reasons why the transcontinental was moved south. There was also the advantage of reducing competition from U.S. railways by being closer to the border.

Russia was the "Big Bear" in those days, even as it has been more recently during the "cold war." Canadians joined British forces to fight against Russia in the Crimean War in 1854 and the situation was uneasy for many years. Victoria was more heavily fortified in 1878 owing to the possibility of an attack by a Russian fleet that was operating in the Pacific.

Other events on April 30:

1630 — Charles La Tour and Son received 4,500 square miles of Nova Scotia.

1658 — First school in Montreal opened in a stable.

1745 — New England force, led by Sir William Pepperell, began attack on Louisburg.

1759 — General Wolfe was at Halifax before sailing to attack Quebec.

1803 — Napoleon abandoned plan to recapture Canada for France.

1817 — Bishop of Quebec was made member of Legislative Council.

1835 — Sir Francis Bond Head became Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada.

1864 — Prince Edward Island agreed to discuss proposed Maritime union. Chilcotin Indians massacred road-builders in British Columbia.

1890 — Crees and Blackfeet Indians clashed in Alberta.

1960 — Queen's Own Rifles of Canada celebrated 100th anniversary.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Harry K. Thaw, convicted in 1906 of the murder of architect Stanford White, subsequently spent many years in an institution for the criminally insane. While there, he established a reputation as a composer of top level bridge problems.

After his release, he conducted regular duplicate games in his Maryland mansion, with prizes for all participants, and no payment of card fees (he was reputed to be worth 40 million dollars).

The deal diagrammed today is one of the hands that he played in his Philadelphia home during the early 1940s. He was sitting in the South seat.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♣.

West's low club opening was captured by East's ace. The six of clubs was then played back. This was not a sound play, since it figured to result in the establishment of dummy's queen and jack, which could not benefit the defenders.

It was quite apparent to Thaw that he had no legitimate chance to fulfil his contract, unless West had started with the K x x of clubs. In this case, he could ruff East's club return, draw trumps, and ruff a third club lead. With West's king presumably falling, the board's club queen would not provide a discard for one of South's hearts.

Another possibility of making the game was to discard a heart at trick two, and allow West to win the trick with his club king. While this play would establish dummy's two remaining clubs as winners, they would be uncashable. West, upon taking his club king, would now surely shift to hearts, since South's discard in that suit would be interpreted as a sign of heart weakness.

Thaw solved his problem in simple psychological fashion: at trick two he discarded his four of diamonds! When West won the trick with the club king, he made haste to return a diamond, hoping that East held the ace and queen.

Thaw won with the ace, drew trumps, and then overtook his diamond queen with the board's king. On the diamond jack and the two high clubs, he discarded his three losing hearts.

WALES WINS BORDER 'WAR' WITH U.K.

LONDON (AP) — Wales won a border fight with England Tuesday after more than 400 years of skirmishing.

Monmouthsire, which was seized for England by King Charles II, will soon be part of Wales officially, the House of Commons was told by George Thomas, secretary of state for Wales.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica will have to change its description of Monmouthshire as "a county of England on the Welsh border," and the long-active Monmouthshire in Welsh Society may have to disband for lack of a target.

Ambassador Asked for Canadian Post

By BRYDEN WINSBY

Pil-Shik Chin fixes your gaze with his and fields every question with a directness born of experience.

Pil-Shik has been the Korean ambassador to Canada since January and was in Victoria Wednesday to call on Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson and Premier Bennett.

While here, he took the time to shed a little light on the feelings of the people in a small country trying to stay alfoat in the sea of ideological dispute.

"In my heart I am a Korean, but I know I must see things as a citizen of the world. I cannot emphasize how important the free way of life is to Koreans. I have seen what the communists have done in my country I believe in the evolution of history through respect for the individual. Communism does not provide this respect."

What of the corruption of the smaller nations of East Asia?

"Corruption can be a difficult thing to prove. Wiping out corruption is something like catching a rat in a pot. Many times you are in danger of breaking the pot."

NO THREAT

What of the emergence of Japan as an economic power both in Asia and in the world?

"We admire the hard work and the industriousness of the Japanese people and the contributions they have made towards peace in East Asia."

"We do not feel that Japan will ever again pose a serious threat to the security of East Asia. The peoples of the smaller nations are aware now, and will not allow Japan to become a menace."

Pil-Shik indicated that any conflict between the major powers of East Asia would arise from the Chinese mainland, not from the island of Honshu.

Is there a restlessness amongst the youth of Korea as there is in the West?

TRADE INCREASE

"They cannot afford it. They have to work hard and have not the means to support a leisurely way of life. Neither does the Korean government."

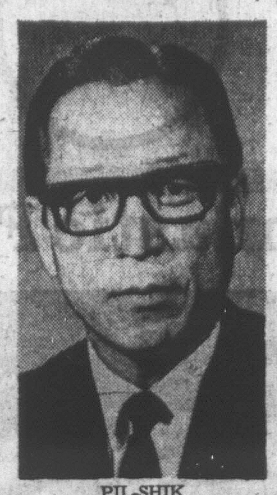
Pil-Shik spoke of the tremendous rise in trade Korea has experienced over the past few years, and with Canada in particular.

"Today," he said, "we trade with 90 nations of the world. All our efforts are concentrated on economic development and mutual help.

"Our annual trade volume with Canada a few years ago was less than $5 million. Last year our countries did $28 million dollars worth of trading."

Canada's main exports to Korea, he said, are sulphur, asbestos, newsprint and plywood, while Korea exports footwear, garments and other manufactured and semi-manufactured goods.

He said he expected Canadian-Korean trade to increase greatly over the next few years.



PIL-SHIK
. . . Korean at heart

There is no national religion in Korea, he said. Religion is a matter of choice.

"We embrace Christianity, Bhuddism, Confucianism and many others—religion is free in Korea.

"As a matter of fact many Koreans have a special place in their hearts for a Canadian missionary, Dr. Scofield, who played a very important role in Korea. He worked hard not only in religion, but in the education of the people and is loved because of the role he played during the Japanese conquest."

"When he died at the age of 81, he was buried in Korea, according to his will.

Pil-Shik said Scofield became something of a national hero for encouraging Koreans to fight the Japanese. So much so, in fact, that after being expelled from the country during the war, he was asked by the Korean government to return when it ended.

DECORATED

When he returned, he was given honorary citizenship, a doctorate from Seoul University and was decorated by the Korean government. When he died, he was given a public funeral and buried in the national cemetery.

"So you see, Koreans hold Canadians in a higher regard than you might at first think."

Was he disappointed to learn of his appointment to Canada rather than, say, the United States?

"I asked to come here."

Voter Changed His Mind About Budget Referendum

A city voter has changed his mind about opposing today's $6.3 million capital budget referendum.

But Jack McKenzie, 1421 Taunton, still supports the principle that municipalities should be able to raise this kind of money by council action rather than public referendum.

And he is calling on voters to show they support this view by joining him in depositing $1 in the ballot box.

"After talking to a number of elected representatives, I have been convinced that the progress of Victoria would be unreasonably impaired if the capital budget is defeated," he said today.

"There I am going to vote for the capital budget. However, I will deposit $1 in the ballot box as a vote against the principle of government by referendum."

He said if other property owners agree there should be no referendums, "they should indicate their opinion by depositing their dollar. Voters can only indicate their opinion if they turn out to the polls."

Last week McKenzie said he favors continued development and is prepared to support this with taxes but he should not be burdened with decisions which council should make.

100-Mile Belt Approved By Sea Expert

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian expert on the law of the sea said Wednesday that he thinks Canada is making a contribution to the development of international law with its proposed 100-mile anti-pollution belt in the Artic.

J. A. Beesley, head of the legal division of the external affairs department, said he finds it difficult to think that Canada's action in this area will shock the rest of the world. He said conservationists agree that the only way to prevent serious sea pollution is for coastal states to take more action.

Beesley appeared before the Commons external affairs committee to discuss the bill that would extend Canada's territorial sea to 12 miles from the present three. But the anti-pollution bill came up for repeated references.

Beesley said he doubts whether there would have been general acceptance of the increased territorial sea in 1964, and certainly not in 1958 when the subject was before the Geneva convention of the law of the sea.

Crucial Test at Polls

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Quebec voters overwhelmingly swept the pro-federalist Liberal party into offfice Wednesday in one of the province's most crucial elections since Confederation.

Robert Bourassa, leading the Liberal party in his first campaign, defeated the Union Nationale government of Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand which had governed the province since 1966.

After a campaign in which Quebec independence was a major issue, Rene Levesque saw his separatist Parti Quebecois gather 24 per cent of the popular vote, although he suffered personal defeat.

The Liberals with 44 per cent of the popular vote won 65.7 per cent of the seats in the legislature. The Union Nationale, with only 20 per cent of the popular vote, and the Creditistes with 11 per cent of the popular vote, won 14.7 per cent and 12 per cent of the seats respectively.

The Parti Quebecois, however, with 24 per cent of the popular vote, won only 6.4 per cent of the seats in the legislature.

Final standing when counting ended for the night, compared with the results of the June 5, 1966, general election:

	1970	1966
Liberal	71	50
Union Nationale	16	56
Creditiste	13	—
Parti Quebecois	7	—
Independent	—	2
Doubtful	1	—
Total	108	108

The election of a strong majority government at a time when Quebec is in the midst of economic uncertainty brought jubilation to the business and financial community.

Growing separatist strength in recent years was blamed by business leaders for a slowdown in the economy of the province, currently plagued with a level of unemployment only surpassed in the Atlantic provinces.

Bourassa said this morning that he is leaving immediately for Quebec City to begin forming his new government. He said he hopes to announce his cabinet within 10 days and that medicare and a budget will receive priority.

"Drafting a budget will be a difficult task in view of the present financial position of the province," he said.

Medicare, he added, will be introduced July 1.

Leading business executives said the result will set an improved climate which they hope will attract capital and encourage growth.

The Liberals and the pro-federalist Creditiste party together won a total of 84 seats and 55 per cent of the popular vote. The Liberal share of the vote was 44 per cent.

The Parti Quebecois, meanwhile, received 24 per cent of the popular vote, three times the support sepa-

Viet Cong Driven From Cambodia Towns

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese armored force supported by American planes and artillery pushed 24 miles into Cambodia today and occupied towns from which the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese drove the Cambodian army earlier this month.

The South Vietnamese did not fire a shot in taking Chipou and entering Prasaut, on Highway 1. But another Saigon force thrusting in from another direction encountered heavy resistance.

With U.S. advisers accompanying them, more than 15,000 South Vietnamese troops were pushing across a section of eastern Cambodia in a pincer operation to smash North Vietnamese base camps.

South Vietnamese spokesmen reported 435 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese killed, many of them by American planes.

Two American advisers were wounded, the U.S. Command said. They were the first U.S. ground casualties reported in an offensive operation on Cambodian soil, although other Americans have been wounded in planes that strayed across the border.

HIT IN ERROR

Field reports said South Vietnamese casualties so far were 32 killed and 168 wounded. Fifty-five of the wounded, their commander said, were the victims of U.S. helicopter gunships which fired by mistake on a battalion of government troops.

Associated Press correspondent Peter Arnet reported from Chipou that the Saigon force moving into Prasaut expected to link up Friday morning with Cambodian troops operating out of Svay Reing, the provincial capital.

But a Cambodian government spokesman in Phnom Penh said the Americans and the South Vietnamese had not informed his government of the invasion, and Cambodian forces were taking no part in the operation.

The decision to move so deep into Cambodia was not made until this morning, the operation commander, Lt.-Gen. Do Cao Tri, said. The original targets of the invasion force were Viet Cong and North Vietnamese bases just a few miles inside the border, but Tri said he decided to make a major thrust along Route 1 "so that we could finish the job, neat and tidy."

Laos Attack Destroys Status Quo

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — The strategic southern Laotian town of Attopeu was captured by North Vietnamese troops today in what observers here called the beginning of the end of the status quo is Laos.

It marked the first time that North Vietnamese or Pathet Lao forces had crossed a ceasefire line established in 1962 to attack a government outposts.

Military observers here believe the North Vietnamese captured Attopeau to stop government forces moving into areas traditionally controlled by the Pathet Lao but recently weakened by the Communist troop pullback.

Politically, the fall of Attopeu may have far reaching consequences, the observers said.

They said it had destroyed the general belief in Vientiane that for all their strength and numerical superiority the North Vietnamese would not cross the ceasefire line to move into areas controlled by the government since 1962.

CAMBODIA OPERATION NOT LONG-TERM—U.S.

But the unsigned statement circulated on Capitol Hill said the president found it necessary to send advisers and arms into Cambodia from Vietnam "to save American lives."

The memorandum was circulated in advance of the president's speech to the nation tonight in which he will seek to allay fears that the allied thrust into Cambodia may widen the war in Southeast Asia.

U.S. Agency Probes Tampering Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is investigating charges that some of its officials have manipulated laboratory result for years to avoid weakening or contradicting established government policies on food additives and pesticide safety.

The charges, brought by Dr. Howard L. Richardson, chief pathologist in the FDA's bureau of science, contend that middle-level agency officials have expunged conclusions and recommendations from reports on animal experiments because they cast doubt of FDA policies.

The findings might have caused FDA policy-makers to reconsider "safe" labels for certain food additives and coloring agents and to re-estimate permissible pesticide levels for food.

A pathologist employed by the FDA to investigate the charges has found substantial support for Richardson's charge.

"There have been modifications of statements and reports," said the consultant, Dr. Harold Stewart, retired

VOTE DOESN'T CHANGE IT

Difficult Period Ahead—WAC

The Quebec election doesn't change the fact that Canada "is going to be in a very difficult period for the next few years," Premier Bennett said today.

Bennett said in an interview he is pleased that one party — the Liberals — received a majority of seats in the election, but noted that "the separatists have the second largest number of votes."

He said constiltutional problems will have to be de-emphasized and economic problems stressed in the years ahead and added he feels Liberal Leader Robert Bourassa will agree with him on that score.

Not only Bourassa. Politicians across Canada were viewing Wednesday night's results in much the same light as British Columbia's premier.

MIZED FEELINGS

There is a mixture of feelings including:

Relief in the clear majority for the Liberals indicating an affirmation of Quebec's willingness to give confederation another chance;

Caution because the separatist Parti Quebecois came second with almost one-quarter of the popular vote suggesting a core of support that could increase if the Liberals fail;

And apprehension because Bourassa under pressure of inflation must try to switch popular dissatisfaction from ideology to battling the economic and unemployment problems that fueled the separatist fire.

AMAZING

Bennett described the performance of the Creditistes as "amazing," but said the disparity between popular vote and seats won by all parties in the election indicates the need for redistribution in Quebec.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett agreed with Bennett's

Federalism Favored—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today the Quebec election returns prove without doubt that Quebecers are overwhelmingly in favor of federalism.

This was shown not only in the "huge landslide" for the Liberals, he told reporters, but also in the vote for the Creditistes.

Trudeau said a lot of people who voted for the separatist Parti Quebecois were not voting for separatism but for a change from the old parties.

The prime minister said the separatist vote was no doubt due to many generations of frustration and anguish. These feelings would not disappear overnight.

The vote was also a vote for a stronger government to help the province out of its economic difficulties.

Trudeau promised federal co-operation.

Trudeau told Quebec Liberal Leader Robert Bourassa his election victory comes at an important moment in Canada's political history. "I sincerely hope that, in a climate of closer and more informed co-operation, our two governments will be able to combine their respective efforts, so that Quebec may enjoy vigorous progress and thus contribute to the progress of all Canada."

Last Cheer in Doubt Despite UN Collapse

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP) — The sudden collapse of Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand's Union Nationale party has given both federalists and separatists something to cheer about.

It remains to be seen who will have the last cheer.

Robert Bourassa's Liberals, Quebec's most federalist party, won 71 of the 108 legislature seats in Wednesday's general election as the Union Nationale representation sank to 16.

But Rene Levesque's separatist Parti Quebecois attracted nearly a quarter of the votes, a moral victory for his new party. Seven separatists were elected.

In terms of popular vote the separatist party is far from the minuscule Prime Minister Trudeau once said it was. The Parti Quebecois has become the leading opposition party in this regard.

Even though Mr. Levesque himself was defeated, he could take consolation in seeing his party become the main opposition force to the Liberals in their stronghold on Montreal Island.

MAKE STRONG SHOWING

The Creditistes, also a federalist party, won 13 seats in their first foray into provincial politics in Quebec. They gathered 11 per cent of the popular vote, almost all of it in rural Quebec.

Thirty-five per cent of Quebecers voted against the two traditional parties. This wave of protest virtually flattened the Union Nationale, but the Liberals held firm.

Mr. Bourassa's 71-seat victory pales somewhat when regarded in terms of popular vote. The Liberals got about 44 per cent of the vote, less than in 1966 when they won only 50 seats.

In effect, the Liberal landslide is explained by a combination of the party's own strength, the Union National's weakness and the Creditiste and separatist vote in several ridings.

The question now is whether some kind of a coalition will form between the urban-based Parti Quebecois and the rural-based Union Nationale, a diminishing electoral force in Quebec since 1956.

A number of Union Nationale members, including Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal and Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Marcel Masse, have flirted with separatism and may try to line up their party with Mr. Levesque's growing group.

This political situation will keep up the pressure for constitutional change despite what could be regarded as an emphatic rejection of separatism by Quebec voters.

MOST FAVOR UNION

As a referendum on independence, one might argue that the election showed at least two thirds of Quebecers in favor of keeping Quebec within Canada.

Mr. Bourassa had pledged to make federalism work for the prosperity of Quebecers. He wants money from Ottawa and says he will conduct "tight-fisted" constitutional negotiations.

His immediate tasks include the making of a cabinet. He has 71 legislature members to choose from, but most are, like himself, without cabinet experience.

Israel Renews Plea for Aid

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Abba Eban called on the United States today to fulfil its commitments and ensure Israeli security to counter Russia's growing military involvement in Egypt.

Eban, speaking at a news conference, referred to a statement by State Secretary William P. Rogers that the U.S. "would ensure the security of Israel is not jeopardized" when he announced the interim American rejection of Israeli requests for more Phantom and Skyhawk jets last month.

A statement from Tel Aviv Wednesday that Russian pilots were flying defence missions over central Egypt was followed by an announcement that President Nixon has ordered a full study to determine whether the Middle East arms balance has been affected.

U.S. officials said the Soviet Union's direct participation in Egypt's air defences had apparently changed the Middle East balance in favor of the Arabs.

Presidential spokesman Ronald Ziegler indicated that the review would determine whether Nixon would change his decision, announced in March, not to act on an Israeli request for 25 Phantom and 100 Skyhawk warplanes.

Meanwhile, on the battle front, Egypt said it made its biggest and deepest penetration raid since 1967 into Israeli-held territory today along the Suez canal, doing heavy damage to Israeli fortifications.

Israel denied the claim. The Israelis said their troops and planes repelled the Egyptian attack before dawn today and sank four Egyptian boats.

Nine hours after the Egyptian raid, the Israeli military command said Israeli jets launched two air attacks against Egyptian positions on the canal, and all planes returned safely.

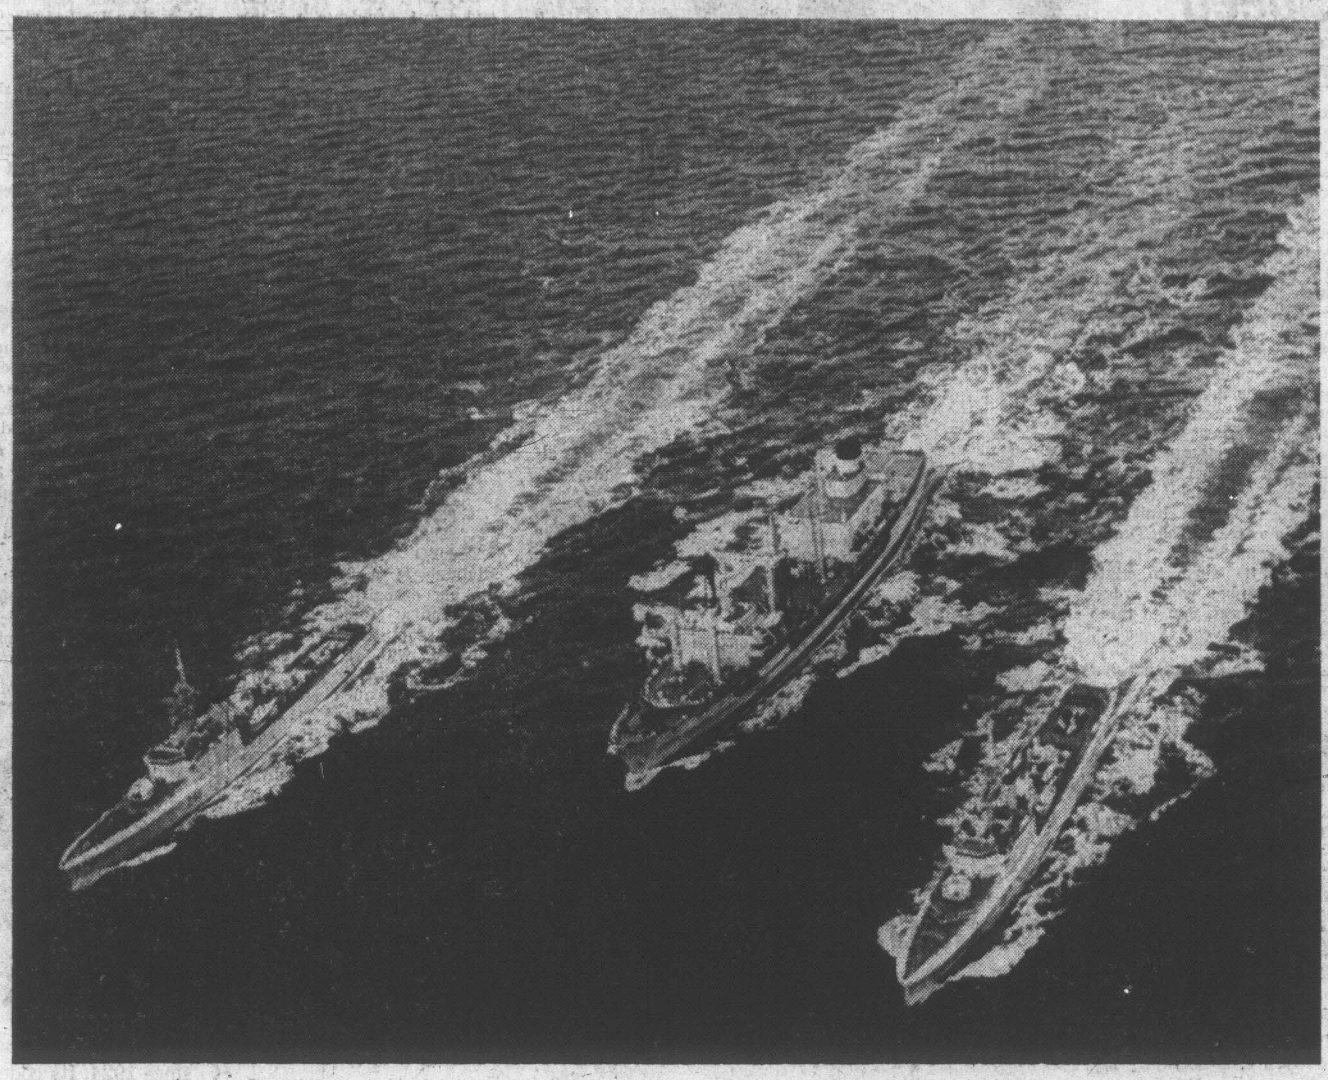
Join The Navy And See Expo 70

Off to Japan Monday are the Esquimalt-based destroyer-escorts HMCS Yukon and HMCS McKenzie, and the fleet replenishment ship HMCS Provider (centre). The three ships, with a total complement of 650 personnel aboard, will take part in Canada Week celebrations at Expo 70 while visiting Kobe and Osaka May 22 to June 1. They will also visit the Japanese ports of Hakodate, Yokosuka and Sasebo. Under the command of Capt. Robert Peers, the three ships will call at Pearl Harbor en route back to Victoria in July.



Hospitals Move Ahead Snail-Like

By DON VIPOND

They called it a "progress report" at the regional hospital board meeting Wednesday but it revealed more hang-ups than progress.

Directors received the first of what is to be a series of monthly progress reports on every hospital project in the region.

It shows that a project generally takes about two years from the time it is "initiated" to creep along the tortuous road of studies, plans and approvals to the point where building is ready to begin.

Construction then takes months, perhaps as long as a year.

EXAMPLE AT GORGE

Just how long progress takes for local hospital improvement is best illustrated by the case of Gorge Road Hospital.

The concept of adding 150 beds there for chronically ill patients had been approved by the provincial government and all local bodies when a referendum for spending approval went to a vote in October of 1968.

The word Wednesday, 18 months later, is that working drawings and specifications, which were to have been ready today, will be finished in about three weeks.

Each project begins with the board of directors of the hospital concerned. It then goes to the region's hospital board for approval but the biggest hurdle is getting the green light from the provincial government's Hospital Insurance Service.

The BCHIS must approve the concept, sketch plans, working drawings, going to tender, letting the contract. All told there are 10 points along the way requiring BCHIS approval before one brick can be put on top of another.

Weeks, sometimes months, can slip by between these approvals.

OIL SLICK RESEARCH SEEKS FUNDS

A tag day to raise funds to determine the cause and the extend of damage caused by an oil slick off the coast of Alaska will be held by the Voice of Women.

Tags will be sold between 7 and 9 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Mavis De Girolamo, an official of the organization, said funds will be used to outfit the proposed Green Peace vessel which will investigate the area.

The ship will be manned by scientists and scientific equipment.

Contracts Awarded On Outfall

The first contracts were let Wednesday for a major sewerage project in Greater Victoria.

The contracts are for supply and delivery of steel pipe and pumps for the Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt.

Tenders were called earlier this week for construction of the outfall.

And directors of the Capital Regional District board gave final reading to a $7.5 million bylaw for the outfall and main trunk line leading to it. The debt will be shared by Esquimalt, Victoria and Saanich.

OVER MILE LONG

The new outfall will be 6,100 feet long, or more than a mile, and will replace the existing 57-year-old outfall which discharges sewage just off the shore.

Seven companies submitted nine different bids for supply and delivery of steel pipe and fittings. Directors awarded the contract to Rodman Supply Co. at $169,380, subject to review of financial and management information available on the company.

Rodman is a subsidiary of White Shield Corp., based in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and primarily a supply company servicing the oil industry.

Three companies submitted bids for sewage pumping equipment and board directors awarded the contract to Worthington (Canada) Ltd. for $27,109.

AMONG THE DELAYS, SOME ADVANTAGES

Site Set for Jubilee's Addition

Hospital expansion and improvements in the Capital region are planned or in progress from Colwood to the Gulf Islands.

Here is a summary of the "progress report" released Wednesday:

● At Royal Jubilee Hospital — 150 beds for patients requiring extended care will be built on the southeast corner of the grounds, between Lee and Fort Streets.

Architects are preparing design and construction cost estimates.

A master plan for the hospital's development from 550 to 660 acute care beds along with extensive outpatient and day care services is nearly finished and should be available about the end of May.

One fourth-floor renovation project, initiated 14 months ago, was finished two months ago, returning 23 beds to service with improved patient care support.

Another project on the same floor, to provide an eight-bed intensive care unit and a intensive care unit for heart cases, was started a year ago. Cost estimates are now being reviewed by the provincial government's Hospital Insurance Service.

The hospital is still waiting for BCHIS approval to spend $10,000 in the Bay Pavilion which will add 22 beds. It has been waiting two months.

The addition of a fifth floor to the hospital's south wing and renovation of the adjacent fifth-floor east block was initiated over four years ago. It was finished in January at a cost of $625,000.

● At St. Joseph's Hospital — plans to renovate surgical facilities went to BCHIS four months ago. Despite three follow-up letters, the hospital is still waiting approval to proceed.

Also in the hands of BCHIS for approval are plans for an intensive care unit to treat burn victims, plans for case rooms and nurseries.

Renovations to pediatric facilities have been approved and tenders are expected shortly. The hospital is working on plans for a prefabricated unit for convalescent patients.

● At Gorge Road Hospital — A contract to build 150 beds for extended care patients will likely be let this spring.

But Health Minister Ralph Loffmark has told the regional hospital board that if bids are over $2,045,000 he has approved for the project, no contract will be approved.

● Rest Haven Hospital replacement — while the regional hospital board has approved purchasing 22 acres in Central Saanich as the site for Rest Haven's replacement, BCHIS hasn't yet.

Instead it has asked for studies to determine site preparation costs.

● St. Mary's Priory — discussions between the regional hospital board and the Sisters of the Order of St. Benedict on development of extended care beds there are continuing.

● Lady Minto Hospital, at Ganges on Sat Spring Island, is slated to get 15 extended care beds. Alterations related to the addition are still under discussion with BCHIS.

Polls Open Until 8 Tonight On Capital Budget Bylaw

Victoria property owners this morning were showing increased enthusiasm in the $6.3 million capital budget referendum.

At noon some 1,178 people had cast ballots. Last June the total number voting in the 12-hours the polls were open was only 3,430.

Deputy returning officer George Merz said he expected the tempo to pick up after 5 p.m.

Some 18,000 voters are eligible and 60 per cent of the votes cast must be favorable if the measure is to pass.

Included in the program are $3.7 million for road improvements, $1 million for waterfront development, $382,000 for pollution control, $633,000 for improving city maintenance yards and $560,00 for fire prevention and protection.

The polls, which close at 8 p.m., are located at the Silver Threads Activity Centre, Centennial Square; Goodwill Enterprises, 220 Bay; James Bay Athletic Association Hall, 205 Simcoe; Sir James Douglas Elementary, Thurlow Road and Oaklands Elementary, 2827 Belmont.

Former Fire Chief Dies at 67

Joseph Law, pioneer Victorian and former Saanich fire chief died this morning at Royal Jubilee Hospital after a brief illness. He was 67.

Law became Saanich fire chief in 1940 after 14 years with the Victoria fire department, remaining in the post until his retirement in 1964. His family moved to Victoria from Scotland in 1906.

Law built the department into a modern, well-equipped unit with eight times the staff at his retirement than when he joined the department.

Law had a reputation for being, a cool, no-nonsense leader whose fairness won the respect of his men.

He is survived by his wife Violet and son Bernard, 3700 Casey Dr., a daughter, Mrs. Beverly Montagnaro, three sisters, Mrs. Ruth Bent, Mrs. Catherine Aldred, Mrs. Grace Daniels and three grandchildren all of Victoria.

Experts Cut Down Bid to Kill Trees

A developer's bid to have seven large chestnut trees felled on Orchard Ave. to get a better view for an apartment house being built at 1321 Beach may have been foiled by B.C. Telephone officials and a tree consultant.

Robert McAdams and Clive Piercy of Park Pacific Apartments Ltd. told Oak Bay council's B committee Wednesday that both B.C. Tel officials and tree consultant Sarge Noro, 2170 Fair, agreed with the axing.

Noro denied this today.

"They asked me to look at the trees. They wanted them out. The only problem with those trees is that they're interfering with their view. They're not old or ugly, as they say."

Noro said the developers had asked him to write a letter in support of their bid, but he refused.

★ ★ ★

B.C. Tel spokesman Glynn Jones repudiated the developer's statement that D. P. Morison of B.C. Tel. had told the company that they would be "highly pleased if these trees are removed as they hamper the servicing of these lines."

Jones said that he had checked with Morison, who said that he had merely spoken generally about high trees that do cause maintenance problems.

"We looked at the trees today and they're causing no problem at all. If they eventually did, we'd merely ask Oak Bay council to do the necessary trimming."

In a statement today, McAdams said his company had had "a number of inquiries to date, asking if these trees will be removed as they would only be interested in purchasing a particular suite if it had a view."

He felt that two of the trees would probably have to be removed for the purpose of lobby and driveway access.

The matter will be taken up by Oak Bay council.

Arthur Mayse . . .

EACH WEDNESDAY morning, eight women who share a thorny problem meet in the Mental Health Centre at Eric Martin Institute. Each is the mother of a child afflicted with one of the gravest and most mystifying psychatric disorders recorded.

It is called autism. The autistic child is condemned to exist in a world of his own. He is neither deaf nor retarded, although he may have been diagnosed as one or the other. But he is turned off, withdrawn, and so removed from normal communication as to be almost unreachable.

If he is to be saved, he must be reached, and this is what the mothers who attend the weekly seminar are striving to do. Their guide is Dr. Phillip G. Ney, a child psychiatrist whose research on autism has brought a certain amount of light into a particularly murky jungle.

Dr. Ney makes no large claims. Autism is still pretty much of a riddle, its cause not yet pinned down. However, Dr. Ney and other probers have worked out certain hypotheses.

One of these is that the autistic child may have been born with a disorder of the brain-mechanism that filters such incoming stimuli as sights and sounds.

Exposed to the total impact of his senses, the child seeks to escape the bombardment through a retreat so extreme that he can become literally unaware of himself.

With Dr. Ney's permission, I sat in on this week's seminar. It was an informal gathering, with ashtrays on the long table, and coffee served in white crockery mugs. Before it got under way, some of the mothers talked to me about their children.

Mrs. C., brisk and determinedly cheerful, was typical in that her son's condition escaped early detection. Through five heart-breaking years of conflicting diagnosis, she and her husband coped as best they could with the symptoms of Roy's disorder.

As a baby, Roy would let himself be held loosely, but fought against any cuddling. When he was a little older, there was no running with outstretched arms to be picked up. He displayed no sign of pain at a bump or scratch, and danger had no meaning for him.

Yet his temper tantrums were even more nerve-shattering than his aimless rocking from side to side, or his absolute refusal to look into even his parents' faces.

But Roy had a potential, and with the nature of his trouble at last revealed, the slow, painful process of bringing him into the world is well under way.

Reward and withdrawal of reward figures in it. So does ignoring.

The temper tantrums, frustration running wild, occur much less frequently now. When Roy is overtaken by a tantrum, Mrs. C. can and does turn herself into a stone wall. More frequently these days, Roy will look into his peoples' eyes and claim his reqard. (Pennies, cookies or little candies. "We got used to buying Smarties by the pound," says Mrs. C) Also, when he hurts himself, he cries, and that's a sign of progress.

Along with other benefits, the seminars remind these mothers of autistic children that they aren't alone. At this one, progress and failures were reported, and advice sought.

It was a remarkably cooperative searching. Dr. Ney, casual in slacks and grey corduroy jacket, did no more steering than was required of him. At times he explained or clarified: mostly, he contented himself with questions that pointed those who asked them toward answers.

Life becomes even harder for child and parents when the autistic enters the school system. From kindergarten on, he is likely to be bounced from one shool to another. He does not belong with the retarded or emotionally disturbed, and if required to join either group, withdraws deeper into his other world.

The mothers who met for their fourth seminar, and their husbands at work, are in process of forming a Society for Autistic Children. It will be one of a very few in North America. They are hoping that "a friendly lawyer" — the term is Mrs. C's — will volunteer to help them with the necessary paperwork.

Also, they are desperately in need of a special class, with a teacher trained for the job, in which to enroll their children.

"If a class is formed," said Mrs. C., speaking for all, "there'll be no bother about transport. We'll look after that, and we'll help the teacher."

The point, too long ignored, is that the young autistic can be brought out of himself.

Another point: it is most unlikely that the eight children whose trouble has been identified are the only such sufferers in this area. Two of the mothers in the seminar have given me with their names and telephone numbers. I'll pass these on to any parent who requests them.

Crucial Test at Polls

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Quebec voters overwhelmingly swept the pro-federalist Liberal party into office Wednesday in one of the province's most crucial elections since Confederation.

Robert Bourassa, leading the Liberal party in his first campaign, defeated the Union Nationale government of Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand which had governed the province since 1966.

After a campaign in which Quebec independence was a major issue, Rene Levesque saw his separatist Parti Quebecois gather 24 per cent of the popular vote, although he suffered personal defeat.

The Liberals with 44 per cent of the popular vote won 65.7 per cent of the seats in the legislature. The Union Nationale, with only 20 per cent of the popular vote, and the Creditistes with 11 per cent of the popular vote, won 14.7 per cent and 12 per cent of the seats respectively.

The Parti Quebecois, however, with 24 per cent of the popular vote, won only 6.4 per cent of the seats in the legislature.

Final standing when counting ended for the night, compared with the results of the June 5, 1966, general election:

	1970	1966
Liberal	71	50
Union Nationale	16	56
Creditiste	13	—
Parti Quebecois	7	—
Independent	—	2
Doubtful	1	—
Total	108	108

The election of a strong majority government at a time when Quebec is in the midst of economic uncertainty brought jubilation to the business and financial community.

Growing separatist strength in recent years was blamed by business leaders for a slowdown in the economy of the province, currently plagued with a level of unemployment only surpassed in the Atlantic provinces.

Bourassa said this morning that he is leaving immediately for Quebec City to begin forming his new government. He said he hopes to announce his cabinet within 10 days and that medicare and a budget will receive priority.

"Drafting a budget will be a difficult task in view of the present financial position of the province," he said.

Medicare, he added, will be introduced July 1.

Leading business executives said the result will set an improved climate which they hope will attract capital and encourage growth.

The Liberals and the pro-federalist Creditiste party together won a total of 84 seats and 55 per cent of the popular vote. The Liberal share of the vote was 44 per cent.

The Parti Quebecois, meanwhile, received 24 per cent of the popular vote, three times the support sepa-

Viet Cong Driven From Cambodia Towns

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese armored force supported by American planes and artillery pushed 24 miles into Cambodia today and occupied towns from which the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese drove the Cambodian army earlier this month.

The South Vietnamese did not fire a shot in taking Chipou and entering Prasaut, on Highway 1. But another Saigon force thrusting in from another direction encountered heavy resistance.

With U.S. advisers accompanying them, more than 15,000 South Vietnamese troops were pushing across a section of eastern Cambodia in a pincer operation to smash North Vietnamese base camps.

South Vietnamese spokesmen reported 435 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese killed, many of them by American planes.

Two American advisers were wounded, the U.S. Command said. They were the first U.S. ground casualties reported in an offensive operation on Cambodian soil, although other Americans have been wounded in planes that strayed across the border.

HIT IN ERROR

Field reports said South Vietnamese casualties so far were 32 killed and 168 wounded. Fifty-five of the wounded, their commander said, were the victims of U.S. helicopter gunships which fired by mistake on a battalion of government troops.

Associated Press correspondent Peter Arnet reported from Chipou that the Saigon force moving into Prasaut expected to link up Friday morning with Cambodian troops operating out of Svay Reing, the provincial capital.

But a Cambodian government spokesman in Phnom Penh said the Americans and the South Vietnamese had not informed his government of the invasion, and Cambodian forces were taking no part in the operation.

The decision to move so deep into Cambodia was not made until this morning, the operation commander, Lt.-Gen. Do Cao Tri, said. The original targets of the invasion force were Viet Cong and North Vietnamese bases just a few miles inside the border, but Tri said he decided to make a major thrust along Route 1 "so that we could finish the job, neat and tidy."

CAMBODIA OPERATION NOT LONG-TERM—U.S.

The White House privately assured key congressmen today that President Nixon does not intend to involve the United States in a "long-term quicksand operation" in Cambodia.

(Strategy Analysis, Page 30)

But the unsigned statement circulated on Capitol Hill said the president found it necessary to send advisers and arms into Cambodia from Vietnam "to save American lives."

The memorandum was circulated in advance of the president's speech to the nation tonight in which he will seek to allay fears that the allied thrust into Cambodia may widen the war in Southeast Asia.

U.S. Agency Probes Tampering Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is investigating charges that some of its officials have manipulated laboratory result for years to avoid weakening or contradicting established government policies on food additives and pesticide safety.

The charges, brought by Dr. Howard L. Richardson, chief pathologist in the FDA's bureau of science, contend that middle-level agency officials have expunged conclusions and recommendations from reports on animal experiments because they cast doubt on FDA policies.

The findings might have caused FDA policy-makers to reconsider "safe" labels for certain food additives and coloring agents and to re-estimate permissible pesticide levels for food.

A pathologist employed by the FDA to investigate the charges has found substantial support for Richardson's charge.

"There have been modifications of statements and reports," said the consultant, Dr. Harold Stewart, retired

Laos Attack Destroys Status Quo

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — The strategic southern Laotian town of Attopeau was captured by North Vietnamese troops today in what observers here called the beginning of the end of the status quo in Laos.

It marked the first time that North Vietnamese or Pathet Lao forces had crossed a ceasefire line established in 1962 to attack a government outpost.

Military observers here believe the North Vietnamese captured Attopeau to stop government forces moving into areas traditionally controlled by the Pathet Lao but recently weakened by the Communist troop pullback.

Politically, the fall of Attopeau may have far reaching consequences, the observers said.

They said it had destroyed the general belief in Vientiane that for all their strength and numerical superiority the North Vietnamese would not cross the ceasefire line to move into areas controlled by the government since 1962.

VOTE DOESN'T CHANGE IT

Difficult Period Ahead—WAC

The Quebec election doesn't change the fact that Canada "is going to be in a very difficult period for the next few years," Premier Bennett said today.

Bennett said in an interview he is pleased that one party — the Liberals — received a majority of seats in the election, but noted that "the separatists have the second largest number of votes."

He said constitutional problems will have to be de-emphasized and economic problems stressed in the years ahead and added he feels Liberal Leader Robert Bourassa will agree with him on that score.

Not only Bourassa. Politicians across Canada were viewing Wednesday night's results in much the same light as British Columbia's premier.

MIZED FEELINGS

There is a mixture of feelings including:

Relief in the clear majority for the Liberals indicating an affirmation of Quebec's willingness to give confederation another chance;

Caution because the separatist Parti Quebecois came second with almost one-quarter of the popular vote suggesting a core of support that could increase if the Liberals fail;

And apprehension because Bourassa under pressure of inflation must try to switch popular dissatisfaction from ideology to battling the economic and unemployment problems that fueled the separatist fire.

AMAZING

Bennett described the performance of the Creditistes as "amazing," but said the disparity between popular vote and seats won by all parties in the election indicates the need for redistribution in Quebec.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett agreed with Bennett's

Federalism Favored—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today the Quebec election returns prove without doubt that Quebecers are overwhelmingly in favor of federalism.

This was shown not only in the "huge landslide" for the Liberals, he told reporters, but also in the vote for the Creditistes.

Trudeau said a lot of people who voted for the separatist Parti Quebecois were not voting for separatism but for a change from the old parties.

The prime minister said the separatist vote was no doubt due to many generations of frustration and anguish. These feelings would not disappear overnight.

Last Cheer in Doubt Despite UN Collapse

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP) — The sudden collapse of Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand's Union Nationale party has given both federalists and separatists something to cheer about.

It remains to be seen who will have the last cheer.

Robert Bourassa's Liberals, Quebec's most federalist party, won 71 of the 108 legislature seats in Wednesday's general election as the Union Nationale representation sank to 16.

But Rene Levesque's separatist Parti Quebecois attracted nearly a quarter of the votes, a moral victory for his new party. Seven separatists were elected.

In terms of popular vote the separatist party is far from the minuscule Prime Minister Trudeau once said it was. The Parti Quebecois has become the leading opposition party in this regard.

Even though Mr. Levesque himself was defeated, he could take consolation in seeing his party become the main opposition force to the Liberals in their stronghold on Montreal Island.

MAKE STRONG SHOWING

The Creditistes, also a federalist party, won 13 seats in their first foray into provincial politics in Quebec. They gathered 11 per cent of the popular vote, almost all of it in rural Quebec.

Thirty-five per cent of Quebecers voted against the two traditional parties. This wave of protest virtually flattened the Union Nationale, but the Liberals held firm.

Mr. Bourassa's 71-seat victory pales somewhat when regarded in terms of popular vote. The Liberals got about 44 per cent of the vote, less than in 1966 when they won only 50 seats.

In effect, the Liberal landslide is explained by a combination of the party's own strength, the Union Nationales weakness and the Creditiste and separatist vote in several ridings.

The question now is whether some kind of a coalition will form between the urban-based Parti Quebecois and the rural-based Union Nationale, a diminishing electoral force in Quebec since 1956.

A number of Union Nationale members, including Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal and Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Marcel Masse, have flirted with separatism and may try to line up their party with Mr. Levesque's growing group.

This political situation will keep up the pressure for constitutional change despite what could be regarded as an emphatic rejection of separatism by Quebec voters.

MOST FAVOR UNION

As a referendum on independence, one might argue that the election showed at least two thirds of Quebecers in favor of keeping Quebec within Canada.

Mr. Bourassa had pledged to make federalism work for the prosperity of Quebecers. He wants money from Ottawa and says he will conduct "tight-fisted" constitutional negotiations.

His immediate tasks include the making of a cabinet. He has 71 legislature members to choose from, but most are, like himself, without cabinet experience.

Israel Renews Plea for Aid

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Abba Eban called on the United States today to fulfil its commitments and ensure Israeli security to counter Russia's growing military involvement in Egypt.

Eban, speaking at a news conference, referred to a statement by State Secretary William P. Rogers that the U.S. "would ensure the security of Israel is not jeopardized" when he announced the interim American rejection of Israeli requests for more Phantom and Skyhawk jets last month.

A statement from Tel Aviv Wednesday that Russian pilots were flying defence missions over central Egypt was followed by an announcement that President Nixon has ordered a full study to determine whether the Middle East arms balance has been affected.

U.S. officials said the Soviet Union's direct participation in Egypt's air defences had apparently changed the Middle East balance in favor of the Arabs.

Presidential spokesman Ronald Ziegler indicated that the review would determine whether Nixon would change his decision, announced in March, not to act on an Israeli request for 25 Phantom and 100 Skyhawk warplanes.

Meanwhile, on the battle front, Egypt said it made its biggest and deepest penetration raid since 1967 into Israeli-held territory today along the Suez canal, doing heavy damage to Israeli fortifications.

Israel denied the claim. The Israelis said their troops and planes repelled the Egyptian attack before dawn today and sank four Egyptian boats.

Nine hours after the Egyptian raid, the Israeli military command said Israeli jets launched two air attacks against Egyptian positions on the canal, and all planes returned safely.

KNIT AND CHAT — By MAY E. MAC LEAN

Shetland Knitters Used Leather Tishie for Speed

I have told you before that collecting old knitting books is one of my hobbies. I like to visit second hand book stores and libraries whenever I accompany my husband on his travels. I find fascinating reading wherever I am.

One very old book published in England has an unique description of Fair-Isle knitting. The tradition is that the Spanish Armada galleon, the El Gran Griffon, was wrecked off the tiny isle of Fair Isle, halfway between the Orkney and Shetland Isles. (These islands are off the northern tip of Scotland.)

The surviving sailors taught the art of knitting to the native women who copied the Catholic symbolic patterns from the gorgeous knitted silks of the Spanish nobles.

No two Fair Isle jerseys were knitted quite the same. Shetland knitters prided themselves on producing garments with slight variations. Patterns were not written down but passed verbally from mother to daughter.

Many knitters worked from the hank, not wasting precious time in winding balls. Less adept knitters, however, kept the various colors from becoming entangled as they worked by putting the wool in a row of jam jars at their feet.

The tremendous speed at which the professional knitters worked was helped by a knitter's belt, called a "tishie." Made from leather, it had holes drilled in it and was worn around the waist.

The knitter supported one end of a needle in a hole as he worked. Possibly the wool used was much thicker and coarser, making the garment heavier on the needles, or the method of holding the needles was entirely different from today's method.

This week, the pattern is crocheted matching shell and sleeveless dress in sizes 12 to 18. It's the newest look in fashion.

Only two rows of crochet form the pattern for the bodice and only one row forms the circular skirt pattern, so it is both quick and simple to do. A knitting worsted weight of yarn should be used.

To order Leaflet No. 2-70, send 35 cents in coin or money order. Do not send personal cheques, please. Your order must be accompanied by a stamped, fully-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. Send to May E. MacLean. Knit and Chat, in care of The Times, 2631 Douglas Street.

Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering. Allow from two to three weeks for delivery.

This week's pattern is a crocheted dress with a matching shell. The sleeveless bodice has only two rows of crochet in the directions. The circular skirt repeats one row of crochet. The dress, in a knitting worsted weight of yarn, is simple and quick to do.

Canada's Child-Killers: Traffic, Home Accidents

OTTAWA (CP) — Traffic and home accidents are the two biggest child-killers, taking 1,424 lives in 1968, says the Canada Safety Council.

Another 535 children died in accidents ranging from drownings to air crashes in 1968—the latest year for which figures are available, said the council in releasing statistics on child deaths before Child Safety Week May 3-9.

Child traffic fatalities totalled 826 in 1968. Of these, 574 died in the five-to-14 age group.

The council reported 508 of the 1,289 pedestrian fatalities were children—about 39 per cent of the total.

The council said children get used to traffic movement quickly, but judge speed and distance poorly.

Pre-school children should be supervised and should understand the importance of practising pedestrian traffic safety rules, the council said. These were the best methods of cutting traffic fatalities among children.

HOMES ARE RISKY

Home accidents led to 598 child deaths, said the council. One of the major killers was suffocation, resulting in the death of 213 babies under the age of a year. Another leading cause was fire and explosion, which killed 217 children under 15.

Others killed in the home died in bathtub drownings, falls, poisonings, burns, blows from falling objects and firearm accidents.

Most suffocation deaths are due to throwing up food or smothering in bed, said the council. Airtight thin plastic should not be used in crib or carriage, as it could suffocate a child in less than one minute.

The major reason for fire deaths was leaving children unattended in the home.

The council said 24 children under 15 died from poisoning. On the average, every 15 minutes in Canada a child was accidentally poisoned.

Tokyo Brides Go Skirtless

TOKYO (AP) — Girls studying at a Tokyo dressmaking school envisage the 21st-century Japanese bride as a scantily attired little number with a trousseau including skirts so short they'd be called skirtless skirts, revealing swim suits, and no underwear. The consensus of 200 girls interviewed in a survey also predicted the traditional kimono will be rare and costly.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Disordered Daughter

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Is there no way a mother can tell a lovely married daughter that she is the world's worst housekeeper?

She is a perfectly wonderful young woman, but her house and children look like the wrath of God!

She came from a clean home and was taught how to do things, but for some reason she never quite "gets around" to doing them.

The iron and the needle and thread are complete strangers to her. She does her laundry only when she runs out of clean clothes.

Fortunately, her husband is a very patient man, but I'm afraid one of these days he will become disgusted and refuse to come home to such a disorganized mess.

Now, how do I tell this to my daughter who has never spoken a harsh word to me? She is sweet and kind. I hate to hurt her.

Perhaps she will read this and I won't have to. — Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: And what if she doesn't read this? Don't wait for her husband to lose patience and "refuse to come home." It may be too late then. Don't rule out the possibility that your daughter may have a physical problem. A thorough check-up may be in order. Have a mother-daughter talk and tell her what you've told me. It would be a kindness.

DEAR ABBY: That letter in you column singed ODDBALL could have been written by me, only he was a man, and I'm a woman. ODDBALL wrote that both his parents were dead and he hadn't been to the cemetry to visit their graves because it "tore him apart" to go out here. He further said he'd been a good son to them—so it wasn't a guilty conscience. He also said his brothers and sisters went out to the cemetery regularly and said it made them feel "good"—but he just couldn't do it.

His question: "Should I go so my family won't think I'm disrespectful to the memory of my parents?"

Your answer: "No. The time to visit parents is when they're living. Stay away and don't feel guilty."

Abby, that's what I've wanted to hear for 20 years. God bless you. May you live to be 100. Sign this — Another Oddball.

DEAR ODDBALL: Thanks. I'll settle for a lot less.

DEAR ABBY: Isn't it impolite to come right out and ask a 40-year-old man why he isn't married? — Roland.

DEAR ROLAND: Yes. Especially if you think you know.

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the little old lady who "borrowed" her neighbor's morning paper, read it, and didn't always remember to return it reminded me of my own experience:

My neighbor is also a sweet little old lady who gets up early in the morning, takes my morning paper, reads it, but doesn't always return it. She'd say, "I don't want to subscribe to the newspaper because I may not live another year."

Well, that was 10 years ago, and she's still bumming my papers. — Mineral Point.

DEAR ABBY: My parents died when I was an infant. I know what cemetery they are buried in, but there are no markers or headstones on their graves. I went to the people in charge of the cemetery and told them that I wanted to buy a headstone or marker with my parents' names on it, and I was told it wasn't possible because my parents were buried in a pair of plots paid for by a church organization, and only a member of that organization could give permission to mark those graves.

I went to that church and spoke to the priest, and he said the organization had long been dissolved and none of the members were living, and he could not give me permission.

I have talked to many people and no one can tell me what to do. Can you?—Mrs. B.

DEAR MRS. B.: Talk to a lawyer. If there is a legitimate reason why your parents' graves cannot be marked, someone should be able to tell you what it is. If there is no existing reason why you can't put up a headstone, then your lawyer will protect your right to do so.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Bachelor Seeks Protection From 'Pugnacious' Widow

CHICAGO (UPI) — Henry Fokt, a bachelor of 42, says the gleam in the eye of a certain widow looks more to him like a glint.

He asked for court protection last week.

Fokt's attorney told Chancery Court Judge Donald J. O'Brien that Mrs. Josephine Baczyk, 37, a "very attractive" widow, has been using "many devious schemes to snare" him into marriage.

Fokt said he has no use for marriage. But, he claimed, Mrs. Baczyk has threatened to kill him if he doesn't take the plunge.

"Most widows are either merry or docile," Attorney Stanley Stoller said. "The defendant is aggressive and pugnacious."

As an example, the attorney said, Mrs. Baczyk once entered Fokt's home to advance her plan to get him to wed. When Fokt demurred, the woman "broke each and every dish in his pantry and threw them on the floor, leaving his kitchen in a shambles."

At least a hundred times, he said, Mrs. Baczyk has stood in front of his home and yelled at him because he rejected her "violent, amorous attentions."

Fokt said Mrs. Baczyk has told him that if he doesn't make her his bride, then she will see to it that he never gets the opportunity to leave another widow on his own hook.

"The plaintiff fears this pugnacious widow and honestly believes she will do as she has told him," Fokt's suit said.

Fokt asked the judge to order the widow to leave him alone, and to desist from calling him at the travel agency he runs — currently downhill because she calls him at least twice a day and ties up his telephone.

MONTREAL, April 30th. — Of the many recipes I've tried for meat loaf, this is our family favourite. The Lipton Onion Soup Mix imparts just the right onion flavour — in fact, heightens the flavour of the whole meat loaf.

MAN-SIZE MEAT LOAF

2 eggs slightly beaten
1½ cups soft bread crumbs
¾ cup warm water
1 package Lipton Onion Soup Mix
7½-ounce can tomato sauce
2 tbsps. prepared mustard
2 lbs. ground beef

Beat eggs in mixing bowl, add crumbs, water, Onion Soup Mix, ½ cup tomato sauce, prepared mustard and ground beef. Mix thoroughly. Shape into loaf or pack in pan; pour remaining tomato sauce over top. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for 1 to 1½ hours. Makes 4 generous servings.

"BEAT THE MOTH TO THE CLOTH". Now is the time, when you are storing your winter garments, furs, ski clothing and children's woollens, to protect them against destructive moths. And I know of no more effective, safe and economical aids than PARA-ZENE MOTH CRYSTALS and NAP-LENE FULL STRENGTH MOTH BALLS. These fine products, made by Record Chemical, are guaranteed to kill moths and moth larvae when used as directed on the container. Pick up Nap-Lene Moth Balls and Para-Zene Moth Crystals to-day and guard your valuable woollens against moth damage for only pennies. Para-Zene Moth Crystals make a wonderful household deodorizer, too!

WITH MANY OF OUR HUSBANDS working under pressure five days (and several evenings) a week, it is up to us to suggest ways for 'our man' to relax. Like taking the train when a business trip is planned. When he boards a CANADIAN NATIONAL train, there's no worry about bad weather... keeping his eyes on the road... traffic lights. With CN doing the driving, he can relax — stretch his legs — eat man-size meals when he feels like it. CN trains are really so comfortable and reliable that you know he'll arrive at his destination refreshed. And CN has special fares for family travelling that are most appealing, too!

Major Leap in Symphony Attendance

Attendance at symphony concerts and attractions during the 1969-70 season was 33,094 — a gigantic leap upward in attendance that has been steadily recorded since the low point of 1966-67, an all-guest-conducted season.

This was disclosed at a Victoria Symphony Society board meeting this week.

Another record has been established at the box office in early subscription renewals. To date these stand at 1,015.

Those who wish to retain their present seat for either the full season or "choice" series of symphony concerts have until May 16 to make their reservation.

Annual meeting of the Symphony Society will be held in Dunlp House, 1960 Lansdowne Road, on June 15 at 8 p.m. All season ticket holders may attend this meeting.

Among plans for next season, which includes the usual number of concerts and recitals as well as special attractions, the board is surveying the society's role in musical education and hopes to provide more symphony programs for schools.

Library 'Depressing'; Facelift Said Needed

Despite recent changes aimed at a more efficient operation, the Greater Victoria Public Library needs more work done — both to its physical appearance and to the organization of its staff.

This was the feeling at Tuesday's library board meeting, where Trustee Alfred Hood called the interior of the building at Blanshard and Yates "depressing" and said it was badly in need of a facelifting.

Hood said there have been complaints that the Yates Street doors were not adequate for the amount of traffic going through them and that they were too heavy for elderly people.

ROOF LEAKS

He said repairs were needed for steps and railings, that the downstairs of the library needed redecorating and that the roof leaks.

"We could go through this building and probably come up with a bill of several thousand dollars," he said.

The board approved his proposal that a thorough inspection of the building be made and that the costs of repair be assessed.

Hood suggested the mayors of greater Victoria be taken on a tour too, in case the library had to turn to the municipalities for funds.

"We can probably get the engineers and our people down here quickly enought, he said, "but I don't know how fast we'll get the mayors."

A $12,000 survey by Woods, Gordon Ltd., which recommended many changes in the operation of the library, came under sharp attack for its assessment of staff requirements.

Chief librarian John Lort said the survey people had "no real knowledge" of the library's operation before they made the staff assessment.

Lort termed "unrealistic" a cutting of staff from the present 85 down to 69 and said "Like many things in the report, it was not thought through."

Trustee Alan Newberry said that accurate or not, the report was the basis of board decision and that if the recommendation was wrong, then the whole staff question should be reconsidered.

The peronnel and survey committees were then appointed to consider what Trustee Gordon Walker called "a basic difference of opinion between what the experts think and what those who run this operation think."

Until some conclusions are reached, the board will delay hiring another staff member for the bookmobile.

The board has, however, hired a new children's librarian, 41-year-old Ann O'Brien. Mrs. O'Brien now lives at Cobble Hill and holds degrees in history and library science, speaks several languages and has worked in four library systems. She will begin work in Victoria early in May.

The library services required in greater Victoria over the next five years were outlined in a report given to board members.

Plans call for two new branches in Saanich by 1972, a small rental service for James Bay, a telecommunications system with other libraries in 1973, a Royal Oak branch in 1973 and a new branch in Oak Bay in 1974. The possibility of amalgamation with the Vancouver Island Regional library in 1974 was also discussed.

Crucial Test at Polls

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Quebec voters overwhelmingly swept the pro-federalist Liberal party into office Wednesday in one of the province's most crucial elections since Confederation.

Robert Bourassa, leading the Liberal party in his first campaign, defeated the Union Nationale government of Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand which had governed the province since 1966.

After a campaign in which Quebec independence was a major issue, Rene Levesque saw his separatist Parti Quebecois gather 24 per cent of the popular vote, although he suffered personal defeat.

The Liberals with 44 per cent of the popular vote won 65.7 per cent of the seats in the legislature. The Union Nationale, with only 20 per cent of the popular vote, and the Creditistes with 11 per cent of the popular vote, won 14.7 per cent and 12 per cent of the seats respectively.

The Parti Quebecois, however, with 24 per cent of the popular vote, won only 6.4 per cent of the seats in the legislature.

Final standing when counting ended for the night, compared with the results of the June 5, 1966, general election:

	1970	1966
Liberal	71	50
Union Nationale	16	56
Creditiste	13	—
Parti Quebecois	7	—
Independent	—	2
Doubtful	1	—
Total	108	108

The election of a strong majority government at a time when Quebec is in the midst of economic uncertainty brought jubilation to the business and financial community.

Growing separatist strength in recent years was blamed by business leaders for a slowdown in the economy of the province, currently plagued with a level of unemployment only surpassed in the Atlantic provinces.

Bourassa said this morning that he is leaving immediately for Quebec City to begin forming his new government. He said he hopes to announce his cabinet within 10 days and that medicare and a budget will receive priority.

"Drafting a budget will be a difficult task in view of the present financial position of the province," he said.

Medicare, he added, will be introduced July 1.

Leading business executives said the result will set an improved climate which they hope will attract capital and encourage growth.

The Liberals and the pro-federalist Creditiste party together won a total of 84 seats and 55 per cent of the popular vote. The Liberal share of the vote was 44 per cent.

The Parti Quebecois, meanwhile, received 24 per cent of the popular vote, three times the support sepa-

VOTE DOESN'T CHANGE IT

Difficult Period Ahead—WAC

The Quebec election doesn't change the fact that Canada "is going to be in a very difficult period for the next few years," Premier Bennett said today.

Bennett said in an interview he is pleased that one party — the Liberals — received a majority of seats in the election, but noted that "the separatists have the second largest number of votes."

He said constitutional problems will have to be de-emphasized and economic problems stressed in the years ahead and added he feels Liberal Leader Robert Bourassa will agree with him on that score.

Not only Bourassa. Politicians across Canada were viewing Wednesday night's results in much the same light as British Columbia's premier.

MIZED FEELINGS

There is a mixture of feelings including:

Relief in the clear majority for the Liberals indicating an affirmation of Quebec's willingness to give confederation another chance;

Caution because the separatist Parti Quebecois came second with almost one-quarter of the popular vote suggesting a core of support that could increase if the Liberals fail;

And apprehension because Bourassa under pressure of inflation must try to switch popular dissatisfaction from ideology to battling the economic and unemployment problems that fueled the separatist fire.

AMAZING

Bennett described the performance of the Creditistes as "amazing," but said the disparity between popular vote and seats won by all parties in the election indicates the need for redistribution in Quebec.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett agreed with Bennett's

Federalism Favored—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today the Quebec election returns prove without doubt that Quebecers are overwhelmingly in favor of federalism.

This was shown not only in the "huge landslide" for the Liberals, he told reporters, but also in the vote for the Creditistes.

Trudeau said a lot of people who voted for the separatist Parti Quebecois were not voting for separatism but for a change from the old parties.

The prime minister said the separatist vote was no doubt due to many generations of frustration and anguish. These feelings would not disappear overnight.

END OF ROAD FOR MIRIAM

LONDON (Reuters) — It probably is the end of the road for Britain's most persistent student driver, 62-year-old Miriam Hargrave.

She failed her driving test Wednesday for the 39th time.

Mrs. Hargrave, listed in the Gunness Book of Records as champion of Britain for driving test failure, has spent more than £300 ($780) on lessons since she started in 1961.

Last Cheer in Doubt Despite UN Collapse

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP) — The sudden collapse of Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand's Union Nationale party has given both federalists and separatists something to cheer about.

It remains to be seen who will have the last cheer.

Robert Bourassa's Liberals, Quebec's most federalist party, won 71 of the 108 legislature seats in Wednesday's general election as the Union Nationale representation sank to 16.

But Rene Levesque's separatist Parti Quebecois attracted nearly a quarter of the votes, a moral victory for his new party. Seven separatists were elected.

In terms of popular vote the separatist party is far from the minuscule Prime Minister Trudeau once said it was. The Parti Quebecois has become the leading opposition party in this regard.

Even though Mr. Levesque himself was defeated, he could take consolation in seeing his party become the main opposition force to the Liberals in their stronghold on Montreal Island.

MAKE STRONG SHOWING

The Creditistes, also a federalist party, won 13 seats in their first foray into provincial politics in Quebec. They gathered 11 per cent of the popular vote, almost all of it in rural Quebec.

Thirty-five per cent of Quebecers voted against the two traditional parties. This wave of protest virtually flattened the Union Nationale, but the Liberals held firm.

Mr. Bourassa's 71-seat victory pales somewhat when regarded in terms of popular vote. The Liberals got about 44 per cent of the vote, less than in 1966 when they won only 50 seats.

In effect, the Liberal landslide is explained by a combination of the party's own strength, the Union Nationales weakness and the Creditiste and separatist vote in several ridings.

The question now is whether some kind of a coalition will form between the urban-based Parti Quebecois and the rural-based Union Nationale, a diminishing electoral force in Quebec since 1956.

A number of Union Nationale members, including Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal and Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Marcel Masse, have flirted with separatism and may try to line up their party with Mr. Levesque's growing group.

This political situation will keep up the pressure for constitutional change despite what could be regarded as an emphatic rejection of separatism by Quebec voters.

MOST FAVOR UNION

As a referendum on independence, one might argue that the election showed at least two thirds of Quebecers in favor of keeping Quebec within Canada.

Mr. Bourassa had pledged to make federalism work for the prosperity of Quebecers. He wants money from Ottawa and says he will conduct "tight-fisted" constitutional negotiations.

His immediate tasks include the making of a cabinet. He has 71 legislature members to choose from, but most are, like himself, without cabinet experience.

Viet Cong Driven From Cambodia Towns

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese armored force supported by American planes and artillery pushed 24 miles into Cambodia today and occupied towns from which the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese drove the Cambodian army earlier this month.

The South Vietnamese did not fire a shot in taking Chipou and entering Prasaut, on Highway 1. But another Saigon force thrusting in from another direction encountered heavy resistance.

With U.S. advisers accompanying them, more than 15,000 South Vietnamese troops were pushing across a section of eastern Cambodia in a pincer operation to smash North Vietnamese base camps.

South Vietnamese spokesmen reported 435 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese killed, many of them by American planes.

Two American advisers were wounded, the U.S. Command said. They were the first U.S. ground casualties reported in an offensive operation on Cambodian soil, although other Americans have been wounded in planes that strayed across the border.

HIT IN ERROR

Field reports said South Vietnamese casualties so far were 32 killed and 168 wounded. Fifty-five of the wounded, their commander said, were the victims of U.S. helicopter gunships which fired by mistake on a battalion of government troops.

Associated Press correspondent Peter Arnet reported from Chipou that the Saigon force moving into Prasaut expected to link up Friday morning with Cambodian troops operating out of Svay Reing, the provincial capital.

But a Cambodian government spokesman in Phnom Penh said the Americans and the South Vietnamese had not informed his government of the invasion, and Cambodian forces were taking no part in the operation.

The decision to move so deep into Cambodia was not made until this morning, the operation commander, Lt. Gen. Do Cao Tri, said. The original targets of the invasion force were Viet Cong and North Vietnamese bases just a few miles inside the border, but Tri said he decided to make a major thrust along Route 1 "so that we could finish the job, neat and tidy."

CAMBODIA OPERATION NOT LONG-TERM—U.S.

Times News Services

The White House privately assured key congressmen today that President Nixon does not intend to involve the United States in a "long-term quicksand operation" in Cambodia.

(Strategy Analysis, Page 30)

But the unsigned statement circulated on Capitol Hill said the president found it necessary to send advisers and arms into Cambodia from Vietnam "to save American lives."

The memorandum was circulated in advance of the president's speech to the nation tonight in which he will seek to allay fears that the allied thrust into Cambodia may widen the war in Southeast Asia.

U.S. Agency Probes Tampering Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is investigating charges that some of its officials have manipulated laboratory result for years to avoid weakening or contradicting established government policies on food additives and pesticide safety.

The charges, brought by Dr. Howard L. Richardson, chief pathologist in the FDA's bureau of science, contend that middle-level agency officials have expunged conclusions and recommendations from reports on animal experiments because they cast doubt on FDA policies.

The findings might have caused FDA policy-makers to reconsider "safe" labels for certain food additives and coloring agents and to re-estimate permissible pesticide levels for food.

A pathologist employed by the FDA to investigate the charges has found substantial support for Richardson's charge.

"There have been modifications of statements and reports," said the consultant, Dr. Harold Stewart, retired

Laos Attack Destroys Status Quo

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — The strategic southern Laotian town of Attopeau was captured by North Vietnamese troops today in what observers here called the beginning of the end of the status quo in Laos.

It marked the first time that North Vietnamese or Pathet Lao forces had crossed a ceasefire line established in 1962 to attack a government outpost.

Military observers here believe the North Vietnamese captured Attopeau to stop government forces moving into areas traditionally controlled by the Pathet Lao but recently weakened by the Communist troop pullback.

Politically, the fall of Attopeau may have far reaching consequences, the observers said.

They said it had destroyed the general belief in Vientiane that for all their strength and numerical superiority the North Vietnamese would not cross the ceasefire line to move into areas controlled by the government since 1962.

Israel Renews Plea for Aid

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Abba Eban called on the United States today to fulfil its commitments and ensure Israeli security to counter Russia's growing military involvement in Egypt.

Eban, speaking at a news conference, referred to a statement by State Secretary William P. Rogers that the U.S. "would ensure the security of Israel is not jeopardized" when he announced the interim American rejection of Israeli requests for more Phantom and Skyhawk jets last month.

A statement from Tel Aviv Wednesday that Russian pilots were flying defence missions over central Egypt was followed by an announcement that President Nixon has ordered a full study to determine whether the Middle East arms balance has been affected.

U.S. officials said the Soviet Union's direct participation in Egypt's air defences had apparently changed the Middle East balance in favor of the Arabs.

Presidential spokesman Ronald Ziegler indicated that the review would determine whether Nixon would change his decision, announced in March, not to act on an Israeli request for 25 Phantom and 100 Skyhawk warplanes.

Meanwhile, on the battle front, Egypt said it made its biggest and deepest penetration raid since 1967 into Israeli-held territory today along the Suez canal, doing heavy damage to Israeli fortifications.

Israel denied the claim. The Israelis said their troops and planes repelled the Egyptian attack before dawn today and sank four Egyptian boats.

Nine hours after the Egyptian raid, the Israeli military command said Israeli jets launched two air attacks against Egyptian positions on the canal, and all planes returned safely.
